5 HIJACKERS CHARGED BY U.S. AS AIR PIRATES; MURDER COUNT ADDED

Defendants Queried About Dec. 29 Blast at La Guardia Airport—$1 Million Bail Set for Each

By PETER KHSS
Four men and a woman who staged a 30-hour trans-Atlantic airliner hijacking to promote Croatian independence were held yesterday in New York in $1 million bail each on Federal air piracy charges and also were confronted with murder charges.

The murder complaint, filed in Criminal Court in Manhattan on orders of District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau, charged them with "placing a live bomb" in the Grand Central subway station that later exploded at the police bomb range in the Bronx and killed Officer Brian J. Murray.

Questioned by the F.B.I. And it was learned that the five defendants had been questioned about the La Guardia Airport bombing last Dec. 29 that killed 11 persons and injured 75. Officials have declined to discuss any of the statements made by the defendants to Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and the New York police since the five hijackers were brought back by French security officials Sunday afternoon.

The explosive device that took the life of Officer Murray and seriously injured three other policemen while they were seeking to deactivate it was understood to have contained dynamite. As late as last month, the police here reported that the La Guardia bomb fragments were still being analyzed to establish the explosive involved.

Threat to Blow Up Plane
The weekend hijacking involved 86 passengers and seven crew members of a Trans World Airlines Boeing 727 that left La Guardia Airport Friday night for Chicago but was seized by the five defendants over Buffalo. The terrorist were armed with what later turned out to be make-believe bombs.

They forced the airliner to head for Montreal, and eventually Keflavik, Iceland; London and Paris, threatening to blow it up with all aboard unless lengthy demands for Croatian freedom were printed by The New York Times and other major newspapers.

A French ultimatum early Sunday ended the hijacking with none of the passengers or crew injured. The pilot, Capt. Richard W. Carey, said on his return to Kennedy Airport that it had been "30 hours of hell."

U.S. DECIDES TO VETO VIETNAM'S REQUEST FOR U.N. MEMBERSHIP

SCRANTON DISCLOSES POSITION

Says Failure of Hanoi to Account for All Missing Americans Shows It Lacks Commitment to Peace

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—President Ford directed the United States delegation today to veto Vietnam's application for membership in the United Nations. The decision to block the application, disclosed here by William W. Scranton, the United States representative at the Vietnamese statement and exchange of diplomatic notes, page 16.

United Nations, provoked an angry response from Vietnamese officials awaiting a meeting tomorrow of the Security Council's admissions committee.

Mr. Scranton said after meeting with the President that Hanoi's continued failure to make a full accounting of Americans still listed as missing in the Vietnam war showed that the Communist Government lacked the commitments to peace and humanitarianism necessary for membership in the General Assembly.

Campaign Called Factor
In a statement issued at United Nations headquarters, Vietnamese officials charged that President Ford's "real concern is not on American MIA's and their families but on the vote in this election campaign."

The Vietnamese, accusing the United States of "an arrogant and hostile policy," also made public confidential notes exchanged between Washington and Hanoi in an effort to renew negotiations to normalize diplomatic relations between the two capitals.

A White House spokesman said late today that "the publication of these confidential exchanges raises a question as to whether there was ever a serious willingness to negotiate."

Request Blocked Last Year
Membership in the world body, requiring unanimous approval of the 15-member Security Council, was blocked last year by the United States when North Vietnam sought entry. The new application by the recently reunited Vietnam was to be considered at a meeting tomorrow of the Council's admissions committee, but the American position appeared to assure its ultimate rejection.

Back New Aerosol Curbs to Protect Ozone in Atmosphere

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK JR.
Special to The New York Times

Sept. 13—Some uses of the propellants in aerosol spray cans will be curtailed to protect the atmosphere's ozone layer, a committee of the National Academy of Sciences reported today.

The committee recommended a waiting period of two years before taking action on some aerosols concerning the ozone layer. The report said that some aerosols could contribute to a trend toward warming of the earth's atmosphere with as yet unknown effects on climate.

Answering a question at a news conference today, Dr. John W. Tukey, chairman of the committee, reviews ozone report.

The ozone layer, a shield of fluorocarbon gases that protects the earth from the sun's harmful ultraviolet light, is being eroded by the release of certain aerosol propellants. The report said that the rate of ozone depletion is roughly seven to 12 percent a year in some areas. Some molecules that reach that altitude are broken down, according to the report, and the fragments tend to rise and form new aerosols. The principal worry is about the effect on the high-altitude ozone layer.

DEMOCRATS WIND UP 5-WAY SENATE DRIVE

Light Vote Is Expected Today in 111 Races in New York State

By FRANK LYNN

Hours before the New York state primary polls opened, five Democratic contenders for the United States Senate wound up their campaigns last night as they had begun—debating nuances and images rather than substantive differences.

At the same time, on the Republican Senate primary front, Senator James L. Buckley, the Conservative Republican incumbent, continued to ignore his challenger in the Republican primary, Representative Peter A. Feysler of Irvington, while Mr. Feysler, a liberal Republican, continued to argue that the incumbent's conservative voting record ran counter to the best interests of New Yorkers.

Most in New York City
The contests for the Senate nominations in both parties highlight a primary election in which voters throughout the state will also decide the outcome of 111 primary contests for Congressional, legislative and judicial nominations in the Democratic, Republican and Conservative Parties. All but 20 of the contests involve Democratic nominations, and almost all are in New York City.

New York is one of a dozen states—including Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Vermont—with Congressional and local primaries today. [Page 29.]

The polls will be open from 6 A.M. to 9 P.M. in New York City, and from noon to 9 P.M. outside the city. Only enrolled members of a party are entitled to vote in their party's primary.

An All-Night Effort

A light turnout of 25 percent or less is expected, based on recent primaries. A total of 3.7 million Democrats and 2.8 million Republicans are eligible to vote.

The five Democratic contenders—Representative Bella S. Abzug, Daniel P. Moynihan, Ramsey Clark, City Council President Paul O'Dwyer and Abraham Hirschfeld—essentially ended their campaigns with a 90-minute debate on a statewide public television network, Channel 13 locally.

However, Mr. Clark, in a departure from the usual campaign finales, planned to campaign throughout the night among night workers, winding up at the Fulton Fish Market at dawn.

The debate was one of the most of Averting a Ford Strike, Midnight, Is Put at 1 in 100

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS
Special to The New York Times

Sept. 13—It appears that the United Auto Workers would strike the Ford Motor Co. at midnight tomorrow.

The union president tonight said there is a "hundred percent" chance that 165,000 Ford workers would make his assessment.

After the new Ford proposal was laid on the table at Ford headquarters here this afternoon, Mr. Woodcock said, "We are a long way apart." There was not enough time to reach a settlement by the deadline, he added, because "there's too much of a gap to bridge."

And Sidney F. McKenna, the chief Ford negotiator, said that he was "not particularly optimistic."
Very little has been settled, according to union officials, and many issues are still in dispute. Today's company proposal would allow a worker to start out each year with a "bank" of 20 to 40 hours of time off that he could take, in a block, any time off in the following year. Days would be subtracted from absences by the worker, who would be eligible for the plan after three years on the job.

The union rejected the offer, which was made in response to one of its high-priority concerns. Mr. Woodcock called the offer "skimpy" and "essentially unresponsive" to the union's objective of "putting new people into the work force."
The new wage offer would add less than a cent an hour per year to the com-

China's Military Now Expected to Play a Bigger Role

By FOX BUTTERFIELD
Special to The New York Times
HONG KONG, Sept. 13—The Chinese armed forces are suddenly being given heightened public attention and could play a key role in any struggle for leadership of China following the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, analysts here believe.

Last week, in an unusual move that apparently signals an increased role for the 3.5 million-member People's Liberation Army, the Communist Party's military commission was named along with the party Central Committee and the Government as co-author of the message announcing Mao's death to the Chinese people. Strictly speaking, the military commission is subordinate to the party Central Committee and the Government.

July after thousands of soldiers were sent to the city of Tangshan, devastated in an earthquake, to lead the relief work and prevent looting. The army had been in some disrepute since 1972 when Lin Biao, then the Minister of Defense, is said to have tried to assassinate Chairman Mao and some senior commanders were implicated. Marshal Lin reportedly died a plane crash in Mongolia as he was trying to escape.

Progress Is Seen in Constitutional Talks on Future of South-West Africa

By MICHAEL T. KAUFMAN
Special to The New York Times

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa, Sept. 10—This vast territory, twice the size of California but with a population of 900,000, is southern Africa's most serious problem after Rhodesia.

From the perspective of black Africa, and of most of the world, South Africa's administration of the one-time German colony is a colonial anachronism. The South African system of separate development of the races is an indignity and an affront to black African nationalists. And the refusal of the South African Government to abide by United Nations decisions and end its occupation of what is formally a trust territory represents defiance of world opinion, possibly calling for the imposition of economic sanctions against the South Africans.

South Africa's point of view is different. The Government in Pretoria insists that its mandate over the territory was legally granted by the League of Nations after World War I. It insists that transition to independence is a question to be decided not by international forums but by the people of South-West, as it is known. It has categorically rejected any role for the militant black group that the United Nations has endorsed as the people's legitimate representative.

Movement Behind the Scenes

Though the views appear irreconcilable, there has been considerable movement behind the scenes in the last few weeks. Sam Nujoma, leader of the South-West African People's Organization, or SWAPO, the militant party that has United Nations endorsement, has issued ambiguous statements from his exile base in Zambia that are being interpreted as a softening of his position, brought about by pressures from black leaders who would like to avoid another Rhodesian quarrel.

Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa, for his part, while repeating his opposition to any direct negotiations with SWAPO, has said recently that there is no reason why the organization could not be invited to participate in the constitutional talks that have been going on here.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, now embarked on a round of diplomatic shuttling concerning southern African issues, suggested that the question of Native township near Windhoek, the capital of South-West Africa, under South African rule. The Pretoria regime insists its mandate over the territory is legal, and rejects any United Nations decisions regarding the future.

Namibia, as nationalists and the United Nations term the territory, is less complicated than that of Rhodesia. Namibia, he said, raises procedural problems while those involving Rhodesia are substantive.

Despite Mr. Vorster's assurances that the territory's problems will be worked out by its inhabitants, and despite the rather surprising success of the bizarre constitutional talks, which have involved Bushmen who had never seen a city, Owambo chieftains from the far north, Herero shopkeepers who had never been in a public place with whites and white lawyers, there is a strong feeling in this clean, tidy and dull town that the forces shaping the territory's future are beyond its boundaries.

"Most whites here truly feel in their heart of hearts that Big Brother in Pretoria will never abandon them," said Brian Olinn, a lawyer and leader of the Federal Party, the white opposition to the Nationalists, who control the local legislature and who are directly tied to the governing South African Nationalist Party. "Because they are blind and brainwashed by Pretoria, they feel the constitutional talks are really a facade, that nothing will change and that the West will ultimately come to their rescue to protect its investments, its civilization and to ward off the Communists."

Organized by a Maverick
Many of the black and brown people, who outnumber the whites eight to one, also place their faith in redemption from outside, according to Mr. Olinn, who commented: "Many of them believe that the Russians and the Cubans are just across the border in Angola waiting to come in. After the oppression they have suffered, they are prepared to welcome them. Better the Russians, they feel than the South Africans."

It is against this backdrop of jockeying and maneuvering that the constitutional talks are taking place in a 60-year-old renovated German gymnasium called the Turnhalle. They were organized a year ago largely by Dirk Mudge, a white man, a maverick member of the Nationalist Party who was born in the territory and intends to make it his country. With what some say was the reluctant backing of South Africa, invitations were issued to the territory's 11 ethnic groups to send delegations.

They came to this central city, where there then were separate white and black entrances to post offices and shops and where Herero women in long billowing hoop skirts—inspired by early German Lutheran missionaries—stepped aside for white pedestrians.

As they sat in fine leather chairs in an air-conditioned hall far from the villages and nomad encampments, they were branded as stooges and puppets. "I admit I called them hand-picked stooges," said Hannes Smith, editor of Windhoek's small English-language newspaper. For several years his editorials denouncing South African policies on the territory and insisting on multiracial nationalism, free of discrimination and apartheid, have led to stoning attacks on his offices and telephoned threats.

"Now I have grown very admiring of the black and brown delegates," he went on. "They have learned. They have become tough. Many of the things I know they are saying in the closed talks are similar to what SWAPO has been saying, and what they have already achieved is really remarkable."

Three Important Things
Discussing the progress of the conference, Clemens Kapuuo, a shopkeeper and former teacher who, accompanied by a bodyguard, heads the Herero delegation, said: "We have achieved three important things. First, we have set a firm date for independence—by Dec. 31, 1978. Second, we have totally rejected separate development or homeland policies that Pretoria would have wanted. We have all agreed on the territorial integrity and unity of our country. And third, we have agreed on the creation of a multiracial interim government, perhaps as early as spring of next year."

Mr. Smith, the editor, maintained that in the context of deeply entrenched racial discrimination, with all the territory's 23,000 white children attending school, youngsters do so, the three achievements noted by Mr. Kapuuo were in fact revolutionary. However, he believes that the conference is being shortsighted in not inviting more active participation by the South-West People's Organization.

"I know what they say—that SWAPO's claims to represent the people are fraudulent—but I travel around this country, and I can tell you that for the black man SWAPO represents the true nationalistic aspirations in his soul. Ach, I disagree with SWAPO in many areas. They get their arms from the East, but remember, they get their ideas from the West, their clothes, their language. They are the only group in the country that can get 3,000 people at one of their meetings. You can't just wish them away because Mr. Vorster thinks that Sam Nujomo is a Communist."

Secret Liaison Reported

Daniel Tjongerero is the editor of a Lutheran magazine who is the spokesman for the internal wing of SWAPO. Because of police surveillance, he says, he is kept from communicating with the illegal faction to exile that has mounted a small-scale guerrilla campaign for several years. Mr. Tjongerero, at age 24 one of the handful of black university graduates in the country, insists that the Turnhalle delegates are puppets. However, he is believed to have had quiet contact with many of the delegations, and as the credibility of the conference has steadily grown, there have been hints of a subtle softening of his position.

Initially the position was that with the organization's international backing it alone was the representative of a free Namibia. It put forth a constitutional program emphasizing black solidarity, a mixed economy and land redistribution. Now Mr. Tjongerero has challenged the conference to enter whatever constitution it comes up with alongside the organization's constitution in a referendum administered by the United Nations.

Some delegates, as individuals, have called for the same thing. "We can't ignore them," said Mr. Mudge, the white maverick, who was elected chairman of the conference and is credited by the blacks with keeping it going. "SWAPO is a force. We should try to find some security authorities.

FRANCE JOINS VISITORS OF MAO

Secretary of Defense and Other Foreigners, Are Among Visitors to Bier

Paris, Sept. 13 (Agence France Press)—Secretary of Defense and his wife Rachel, and other foreigners, including the French ambassador, were among the first to pay tribute to the bier of Mao Tse-tung in the Great Hall of the People in Peking today. The first day that foreigners were permitted to pay their respects to the Chinese leader who died last Thursday was reported to be a Chinese holiday by the French press on Sunday.

They arrived here a week ago as a guest of the Institute of Foreign Relations, which covered on Tien An Men Square, with foreign students the first to be to see the case over Mr. Mao's death. A catafalque shrouded in green plants and cypress—a symbol of mourning—was illuminated by a traditional funeral of Peking, greeted and shook hands with the visitors near the coffin this morning. Besides students and diplomats, foreigners paying tribute to Mr. Mao included businessmen, specialists hired by the Chinese to work on various technical assignments, journalists and tourists. Their automobiles replaced the hundreds of buses on Tien An Men Square that had been bringing representatives of the Chinese people to the Great Hall since Saturday.

Eulogy Set for Saturday. The body is to lie in state until Saturday, when an eulogy is to be delivered. Asked whether cremation or burial would follow, a Chinese official said he did not know. He then added that Mr. Mao had long ago expressed a preference for cremation. However, the official said, cremation is not the wish of the Chinese people. He said many had expressed regret that Prime Minister Chou En-lai had been cremated.

Chinese officials said that Mr. Schlesinger's scheduled trip around China would be resumed tomorrow, as it had been Mr. Mao's wish that he be invited to China.

The American is to go first to Kweilin, in southern China, then to Tibet, the Sinkiang region near the Soviet frontier, and finally to Inner Mongolia. Officials reportedly have told Mr. Schlesinger that Chairman Mao had expressed a wish two days before his death to meet Mr. Schlesinger.

Strategists Say World Peacekeeping System Is Failing

By FLORA LEWIS. Special to The New York Times.

BADEN, Austria, Sept. 12—The political-military system that has more or less kept global order since World War II is breaking down and nothing is in sight to replace it, in the view of 200 scholars, government officials and military experts who have been meeting here for the last four days.

Dr. Christoph Bertram, a West German lawyer, defense expert and director of the International Institute for Strategic Studies, summed up the institute's private debates at a news conference today. He said that a new era is beginning, that many of the old rules of the world game are no longer workable but that nobody has yet figured out the new rules.

The atmosphere of the annual conference, attended by experts from Western Europe, the United States, Canada, Japan and a few developing countries, underscored the extent to which strategic planners consider the future world balance uncertain and the old assumptions of rule by the superpowers as having been undermined.

The theme of the conference was the "proliferation of force and the diffusion of power," focusing on the spread of modern conventional arms around the world and the possibility of proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Resignation But Not Despair. The outlook was basically grim on the chance of limiting the capacity of more countries to start devastating wars. But there was more a feeling of resignation than despair in the acknowledgement that it has gotten harder to prevent violent conflicts.

The people who spend their time studying the hard facts that lead to war no longer had even theoretical solutions for achieving what was once promised as a generation of peace.

The big powers still have overwhelming force, but they can no longer use it to keep the rest of the world in line. Some of the developing countries are gaining awesome military strength, but their conflicting interests have yet to be absorbed into a new system able to work out frictions peacefully.

In this climate, a drastic change from the beliefs of only a few years ago that a system for world security existed if only it could be made to work, there were no suggestions for a new grand design. The consensus was that only great caution, efforts at accommodation and a certain humble confession of ignorance about how present decisions will affect the future are likely to be useful guides.

Surprisingly, the feeling was less pessimistic about nuclear dangers to civilization than it was about the conventional arms race. The Middle East, the Persian Gulf and southern Africa were seen as the most serious trouble spots, where conflicts could be as hard to contain as they are to prevent. There is a perception that the advanced countries, East and West, are no longer able or willing to police the world, while the rising powers are neither able nor willing to accept responsibility for an alternative approach.

The institute is a private research organization founded in 1958 for the study of international security, defense and arms control in the nuclear age.

scarce capital should be spent on military modernization and a bitter dispute over attempts by Mr. Teog to "rectify" or purge parts of the command.

In the Cultural Revolution of the 1960's, the army assumed control over many provinces, but army officers today have largely avoided becoming entangled in this year's anti-rightist campaign. It is possible, some analysts believe, that all sides in Peking wanted to prevent a recurrence of the Cultural Revolution situation.

But the army's potential power remains enormous—"Political power grows out of the barrel of a gun," Mao wrote in 1938. It was the army that was sent to Tangshan after the earthquake this summer; last year, 15,000 regular soldiers were stationed at factories in the southern lakeside city of Hangchow when the city was in chaos because of factional quarrels and workers' strikes.

In the aftermath of the Cultural Revolution, when Marshal Lin was still in power, army officers controlled about 65 percent of all the top provincial party posts. Since 1972 Peking has gradually whittled that number down, but according to one recent estimate, army officers still occupy almost 45 percent of the key jobs as provincial party secretaries or provincial political commissars in army units. That represents enormous power on the provincial level.

However, analysts believe that one major change from the earlier situation is that the long-standing power of the once semi-independent military-region commanders has been broken since most were abruptly transferred in early 1974, evidently on the order of Mao himself.

Some of them had been in the same areas, controlling both the party and military posts, since the Communists took over in 1949. China is divided into 11 large military regions.

The most important current military officer may be Chen Hsi-lien, the commander of the key Peking Military Region and the highest-ranking military officer in the Politburo. There are some indications that Mr. Chen has been serving as Acting Minister of Defense this year, filling in for the ailing Mr. Yeh.

Vorster Says He Will Not Force Rhodesians to Yield Power to their

Special to The New York Times
PRETORIA, South Africa, Sept. 13—Prime Minister John Vorster, speaking on the eve of a meeting with Prime Minister Ian D. Smith of Rhodesia, said today that he would not force Rhodesia into handing over power to the country's black majority against the white government's will.

"The Rhodesians are a proud people, and they won't accept orders from South Africa or anyone else, for that matter," Mr. Vorster told a cheering crowd at a political rally here. "I am not prepared to prescribe to any of my neighbors what their policy should be."

The speech was closely watched for hints of what Mr. Vorster will tell Mr. Smith when they meet tomorrow to discuss the Rhodesian settlement proposals laid before Mr. Vorster by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who met with the South African in Zurich at the beginning of the month.

Pressure on Rhodesia Suspected
 Despite Mr. Vorster's assertion that he will not press the Rhodesian—an assurance that is a political imperative in view of the widespread sympathy for the plight of Rhodesia's white minority in conservative circles in South Africa—diplomats continue to believe that the South African is prepared to exert pressure on Mr. Smith behind the scenes.

Since Mr. Vorster returned from Zurich, where he said at a news conference that he was not prepared to do more than point out the realities of the situation to the Rhodesians, officials here have continued to hint that covert pressures have been applied.

The implication taken by many here is that South Africa is already using its position as Rhodesia's sole supplier to nudge Mr. Smith into a new round of negotiations with the black nationalists. In particular, South Africa is believed to have denied Rhodesia the volume of arms and other supplies it needs to pursue its widening war against black guerrillas, excluding the squeeze on the grounds of rail and port congestion in South Africa.

Police Fire at Demonstrators

By JOHN F. BURNS
Special to The New York Times

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 13—The South African police fired birdshot and tear gas today at crowds of black demonstrators who were attempting to enforce a work boycott among black commuters from the suburb of Soweto. The demonstrators succeeded in persuading about half of the 320,000 commuters not to go to work.

Dozens of demonstrators were reported to have been hit by the birdshot, but no serious casualties were reported.

Later in the day, the security police swept through Soweto and Alexandra, another black suburb, and rounded up a large number of militants. A police spokesman said the object was to put an end to the militants' efforts to enforce the work boycott.

The protest strike in Soweto, the second in three weeks, was demanded in pamphlets circulated in the suburb at the weekend. The pamphlets were issued in the name of the Students Representative Council, a group formed immediately after the outbreak of unrest in June. The leader of the council, Tshepo Masimane, who is 19, is being hunted by the police, who have alleged that he has been one of the principal organizers of the unrest.

Many Young People Killed
 The pamphlets called on workers to stay home to protest the killing of "children" by the police, an allusion to the high toll among young people during the unrest, in which more than 300 people have died in the last three months.

The pamphlets said a strike would also protest the Government's action in detaining more than 850 people without trial, most of them black, and the decision of many companies to stop pay for workers who participated in the earlier stay-away drive.

That effort was promoted by pamphlets circulated in the name of the African National Congress, a banned resistance movement. It provoked clashes between demonstrators and migrant workers who resented harassment by the police at bus stops and railway stations. The clashes resulted in 35 deaths by the police. The strike crippled industry for three days.

STRESSES WEST AFRICA

Portedly Counseling at Rhodesia Issue Second Place

RD GWERTZMAN

President Julius K. Nyerere was reported today by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to resolving the independence for South-West Africa under black majority rule.

Mr. Kissinger's African tour is expected to include a stop in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, to begin a search for solutions to the problems of Rhodesia, also known as South Africa.

The trip is expected to last 10 days. It includes a "shut-out" meeting with Prime Minister Vorster of Rhodesia, although the date is not definite.

Mr. Kissinger is expected to meet with Mr. Vorster on Wednesday, and with American and African leaders in Dar es Salaam to discuss Mr. Kissinger's views.

Mr. Kissinger's views on Rhodesia have been reported to have indicated that independence for the country would be more likely in the near future than in the past.

Messages were at the State Department on Saturday in Washington, D.C., on the subject of South-West Africa.

The trip will include three stops in Africa, Mr. Kissinger is expected to be endorsed from the American plan for Rhodesia.

While Mr. Vorster has not said in the plan, such a move would lead to majority rule in Rhodesia.

Fierce Clashes in Beirut Are Reported Only Hours After Truce Is Announced

Special to The New York Times

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Sept. 13—Fierce fighting reportedly broke out here today along the line between the city's Christian and Moslem quarters only hours after agreement had been announced on a cew truce in the area.

Voice of Lebanon, the radio station of the Christian Phalangist Party, said Christian right-wing forces had blocked an attempt by Moslem militiamen to strike across the line to the museum area. As many as 15 of the attackers were killed and 20 wounded, the radio said.

The radio charged that the Sudanese contingent of the Arab League's peace-keeping force stationed in the area had helped the attackers and that an armored car destroyed in the fighting belonged to the Arab force.

The agreement on a truce was announced last night by Maj. Gen. Mohammed Hassan Ghoneim of Egypt, the commander of the Arab League force.

Fighting was also reported in the mountains east of Beirut and in the north and south of the country, and according to Palestinian and Lebanese leftist guerrillas, Syrian forces took part.

They said that Syrian troops stationed at the approaches of the Moslem port of Tripoli in the north fired rockets at two nearby Palestinian refugee camps, Nahr al Bared and Al Baddawi. They said also that Syrian contingents stationed in the Jezzin mountains in the south pounded Palestinian and leftist positions in the adjacent towns of Roum and Azour.

With only 10 days to go to the inauguration of the Lebanese President-elect, Elias Sarkis, no effective results have yet emerged from the meetings on Lebanon that have been taking place in Damascus, or from Syrian-Palestinian talks during the last few days.

Tito, Ailing, Defers Another Visit; A Political Element Is Discounted

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Sept. 13 (Reuters)—President Tito called off a visit by a foreign head of state for the second time in a week today. Doctors have been treating the 84-year-old leader for acute liver trouble.

It was announced Friday that a four-day visit by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France that was due to start Wednesday had been postponed on the advice of Marshal Tito's physicians. An official announcement today said a four-day visit by Queen Margrethe of Denmark had also been put off.

The early announcement of the postponement of the Queen's trip, due to begin Sept. 28, may have been aimed at silencing widespread speculation in Belgrade diplomatic circles that there might be political implications in the disclosure of the illness.

80 Killed in Karachi In Building Collapse

KARACHI, Pakistan, Sept. 13 (Reuters)—A six-floor apartment building collapsed here early today and at least 80 people were killed and 48 hurt as they slept. The police said the final death toll could be 100.

They said the building, a year old, had poor foundations and the owner had been given permission only to erect a two-story building on the site.

The owner, Karam Elahi, and the building contractor, Ishaq Soomro, were arrested on charges of unauthorized construction. Six members of Mr Elahi's family of seven died in the collapse.

Remember when you visited the Duchess and slept on Porthault sheets?

Now you can enjoy the refresh- ing beauty of Porthault's "Les Fleurs" in your own palace.

Porthault, one of the most highly- prized names in the world of linen, has created this multi-colored floral pattern especially for Wamsutta, another grand old firm. And here it is, first at Altman's, so you can share in a delight heretofore enjoyed only by the privileged few.

You know how Porthault excels in hand-workmanship. Wamsutta achieves that same luxury for you with special touches you won't believe were done by machine. For example, fine blue scalloped borders on top sheet and pillow cases.

And Wamsutta's Designers' Workshop

has even added first-class innovations for you. This Porthault design is in easy-care Ultracale, a 180-thread count percale blend of Fortrel polyester and cotton. So your live-in help (which may be you) will never waste precious time over an ironing board.

Now, for total luxury, you should have the works: sheets, cases and comforters, all in the same design.

And the best part, next to its fashion savvy, is it doesn't cost a king's ransom for Les Fleurs.

You'll find Les Fleurs only at Altman's in the Metropolitan area, so you won't have to waste precious time looking for luxury anywhere else.

Barge Hits Bridge; Truck and Car Fall In Louisiana Channel

MANCHEAC, La., Sept. 13 (UPI) — A barge loaded with tons of thumb-nail-sized white sea shells rammed a bridge over a narrow pass between two south Louisiana lakes today, sending a truck and at least one car tumbling off the 60-foot-high span.

The car plunged into the water and the tractor-trailer crashed onto the deck of the barge, seriously injuring the driver and a passenger.

The authorities were unsure how many cars fell into the water or how many persons were in the vehicle.

"We don't know how many cars went off yet," said a trooper in New Orleans. "We have reports of two cars, but there may be more or there may be less."

Divers Aid Search
Divers were sent to the scene, about 30 miles northwest of New Orleans.

"They [two men in the truck] saw the barge coming under the bridge, and it looked like he was coming too close," said Sgt. Marion Moore of the state police. "The bridge started buckling under them, the truck went straight down with the concrete slab."

"The truck landed right square with the slab on the barge and the trailer broke loose from the truck and fell in. They saw a white car behind them, and we can't find it now."

The police identified the driver of the truck as McKenzie G. Robinson, 35 years old, of Dayton, Ohio, and his passenger as William S. Wedell, 26, of Phoenix. Mr. Robinson suffered a leg injury and Mr. Wedell's back was broken.

The channel connecting lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain is spanned by parallel bridges—the highway bridge, which was badly damaged, and a parallel railroad span, which also was rendered impassable.

The highway bridge has a horizontal clearance for boats of 85 feet. The pass is 30 feet deep.

Route Heavily Traveled
Traffic on the road, U.S. 51, which connects New Orleans with the city of Hammond, is used heavily by travelers between New Orleans and Jackson, Miss. The area also is popular with fishermen and the channel is usually dotted with small boats.

The barge remained upright in the water, the large truck perching precariously on the load of shells that are used for gravel and land fill.

In a similar accident Aug. 1, 1974, on the nearby 24-mile-long Lake Pontchartrain Causeway, a barge knocked out three 80-foot sections of the flat portion of the roadway, killing three people.

Several years before that, another causeway accident killed six people when a bus plunged into the lake where a span had been knocked out.

ALLON ASSAILS A PLAN TO CURB GALILEE ARABS

JERUSALEM, Sept. 13 (Reuters)—Foreign Minister Yigal Allon denounced as "a miserable document" today a report by a Government official who recommended curbs on Arab population growth in Galilee.

Mr. Allon said the report, by Yisroel Koenig, the Government's chief representative in Galilee, had harmed Israel's efforts toward coexistence between Arabs and Jews. It was the strongest attack yet by a Government leader against the report, which called for harsh penalties against local Arab leaders who criticized the Government, reduction in allowances to large Arab families and encouragement of young Arabs to study abroad and stay abroad.

The report, disclosed last week by the left-wing newspaper Al Hamishmar, was written six months ago after a wave of rioting among Israeli Arabs in which six died. Senior ministers have disowned its recommendations; there is continuing Arab anger that Mr. Koenig remains in the area. Mr. Allon said in reply to questions by reporters that "This is a miserable document—there is absolutely no connection whatever between its contents and the actual policy of the Government."

Army Takes Aim At Hordes of Squirrels

MONTEREY, Calif., Sept. 13 (UPI)—The Army wants to unleash chemical warfare upon a horde of squirrels, but has so far been thwarted by the Government.

The battleground is along the central California coast, the scene of a population explosion among squirrels suspected of carrying bubonic plague.

Army tacticians want to use sodium fluoracetate, known as Compound 1080, against the pests. But doing so would violate a Presidential order against the use on Federal lands of any poison that can be passed from one animal to another.

The Army said last month that it would ask for an exception to the order, but Representative G. William Whitehurst of Virginia, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, asked President Ford to turn down the request. He said the chemical could kill humans.

The Army says millions of squirrels are overrunning the 166,000-acre Hunter Liggett Military Reservation, south of Fort Ord, which has been leased for grazing cattle since 1959.

Man Sued Over Practice of Investigating Prospective Jurors and Selling Reports to Lawyers

CE TURNER
Sept. 13—A legal action of investigating reports to trial lawyers today by Godfrey, a man who has panels over the last that the proceeding legal reasons, with for $50,000 against on the theory that national rights were was invaded. Mr. Lehman said he expects, he will move into state courts for review. If he loses there, he said he would move into the Federal courts on the question of denial of constitutional rights.

2 Services in San Francisco
The practice that he is complaining about exists in most large cities and in many smaller ones. It is the investigating by private individuals or corporations for that purpose of the backgrounds of persons ordered to report for jury duty. The reports are then sold to lawyers.
In San Francisco there are two services, one specializing in serving plaintiff lawyers and the other defense lawyers. Both types of lawyers are usually involved in personal injury litigation.

The defense investigation is done by a company supported by the insurance companies, which usually must pay the verdicts that juries vote.
The plaintiffs' lawyer service is supported by sales of reports to lawyers on a case-by-case basis, and the usual arrangement is on a contingency basis, the same way the usual plaintiff's lawyer is paid in a personal injury case.
The reports usually have in them the information of record about the juror, and may also include some information about what happened in juries on which the juror served in the same term of service, which usually is 30 to 90 days and may encompass duty on several jury panels.

"In trials of greater significance, the detectives are limited only by the time before trial, money budgeted and the ingenuity of the investigators," Mr. Lehman said in a statement issued after his claim was filed today.
"They may inspect tax returns, may pry into marriages, family life, bill-paying methods, personal habits—and will often query neighbors, employers, even enemies —whatever suits their fancy," he said.

He added that he regarded the practice as an attempt by each side in litigation to stack the jury in its favor, and said it was "a degrading insult to citizens called to perform their highest democratic function."
Mr. Lehman said he first served on a jury here in 1938 and became fascinated with the subject. He was a juror again in 1965, and then wrote a pamphlet called "What You Need to Know for Jury Duty," which was printed by his employer, Brown & Bigelow, in 1973.
In 1976, when Mr. Lehman was again called in jury duty, he asked the trial judge for the report so him that he thought the lawyers had. The judge refused to order it to be given to him, and he was not selected as a juror. The claim filed today grew out of that incident, he said.

Darold Soedigar, operator of the Plaintiff's Reporting Service since 1930, said in a telephone interview that "I follow the jury trials and note which jurors sit on cases and then I write a synopsis of the case so the attorney can decide whether he wants those jurors on his case." He added that all the information came from public records.

Rolling Stone Is Tilting Toward the East Coast

By LES LEDBETTER
Special to The New York Times

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13—Rolling Stone magazine was born here in 1967 as a balladier sang about going to San Francisco with "flowers in your hair" and tens of thousands of young people responded with an influx that was named "the summer of love."

Like those flowers, that innocent belief in San Francisco as the reborn Atlantis has long since vanished.

The heady environment that existed here in the late 1960's gave local music groups national fame and the city became known for its tolerance of different life-styles and use of drugs.

But Haight-Ashbury degenerated into violence, and the addicts drove the hippies out.

New York and Los Angeles have long since regained their prominence as places where music styles are developed, with Nashville and other Southern cities vying for the third spot.

And the antiwar movement here, once led by such vigorous magazines as the now defunct Ramparts, has seen David Harris and Tom Hayden turn to conventional politics as avenues of protest.

Thus, it came as no surprise when Rolling Stone—which had been a mirror and voice for nine years for many who grew up in the 60's and 70's, the biweekly Chronicle of pop music and pop culture, of liberal and left-wing politics, and of burgeoning counter-culture trends and movements—announced that it was moving its headquarters to New York City.

According to Jann S. Wenner, the 30-year-old founder and editor, the move is for purposes of "consolidation" and because "New York is where the advertising and circulation are" and "I've wanted to for more than a year now."

A Pool of Talent

According to Joe G. Armstrong, 33, the publisher, New York has "a great journalistic energy and pool of talent we want to take advantage of," and "all our growth has been there since the second year."

Both seemed supremely confident of the wisdom of their move as they sat in the loft-like offices here in the shadow of the Oakland Bay Bridge.

According to many connected with the magazine, now and in the past, however, Rolling Stone has been shifting its focus eastward toward Washington and New York City and politics, as opposed to music, for several years in search of a new identity and a new legitimacy.

"Jann has an overwhelming ambition to be among the powers in publishing and in politics, and that means that if you haven't made it in New York, you haven't really made it anywhere," said John Carroll, a senior editor for New West and The Village Voice here who worked for Rolling Stone in 1970.

He, like everyone else interviewed, made an unspoken assumption that the destinies of Mr. Wenner and Rolling Stone were one and the same.

"Jann has the classical psychological profile of a short person who is on the make; and in the publishing business, the power and glory he seeks are in New York," said a current associate of Mr. Wenner, who asked that his name not be used.

"There used to be some action in San Francisco, but the town has gone back to being a sleepy backwater," he added.

The Mellowing Influences

Pop music was "the great uncovered story of the 1960's until we came along," said Mr. Wenner and Mr. Armstrong, who seem today to reflect the mellowing influences of time and money.

"But the interest and perspective of the editors have changed and so have our readers," said Mr. Armstrong, a Texas University law school graduate who also has a degree in journalism and a background in investment banking.

"Maturity means becoming a little more balanced, knowing that the world isn't going to change overnight, learning that the war didn't end because 50,000 of you held a march," said Mr. Wenner, who is also the majority stockholder in the privately held company.

The editor, an intense man who bristles when his magazine is described as a "counter-culture publication" or "a rock paper," said that as other publications began to recognize pop music as a major story for coverage, Rolling Stone began to move away from this one-issue focus and to cover politics and do investigative reporting.

"We find ourselves in competition with the networks, national news magazines and The New York Times and The Washington Post for the best stories now," Mr. Wenner continued. "We are now a national magazine for the generation between 18 and 34," Mr. Armstrong said.

Readership Put at 3 Million

According to the two executives, Rolling Stone is approaching a paid circulation of about 500,000 with an estimated readership of 3 million.

They say the magazine grossed $12 million last year, but will not discuss its worth or profitability because of an offer now being made to some of the co-founders and early investors.

However, after years of depending on record and stereo equipment advertising, the magazine has, in the last three years, begun to attract the attention of such national advertisers as Ford and Toyota and Kodak and Polaroid.

"Three years ago, 85 percent of our advertising was record companies, and a black and white page cost $2,200 an issue, now, at $5,200 a page, and without losing any record companies, they only comprise 25 percent of our revenue," said Mr. Armstrong, recalling the "incredible resistance" of national advertisers on Madison Avenue for years to put money into "that kooky magazine out there."

Nevertheless, there have been a number of book and magazine publishing ventures by Rolling Stone that did not pay their way and drained the paper of its early profits.

And in the early 1970's, the company was saved from bankruptcy only when Max Palevsky, the retired computer executive who is now a financial power in the state and national Democratic Party, bought a substantial share of stock.

"Of all the crazies being published then, it was the best of the crazies and I thought it deserved to continue," Mr. Palevsky said in a telephone interview from his home in Los Angeles.

"It has had periods of real brilliance, and if it's going to continue it's going to have to go to the center of counter-culture, which is no longer San Francisco," he added.

Generally, staff workers here seemed excited at the prospect of moving to

New York and by the challenge of proving themselves "against the big boys."

Paul Scanlon, one of two senior editors who has spent more and more time in the East in recent years—has his two bosses—said: "The move to New York can only help us improve and help us shake the image of counter-culture magazine. Jann and the rest of us have been justifying the respectability we feel we deserve for several years."

Mr. Scanlon added, "The ethos of the '60's is no longer here, and it's time to shake up the publication and the scene."

Mr. Armstrong was quick to point out that the move to New York "says nothing negative about San Francisco" because a new national magazine focusing on the outdoors will be started here by the company early next year, in the same offices now being shut down.

"Our roots are too deep here to get caught up in the inward introspection of New York," Mr. Wenner said.

"But we want to grow," added Mr. Armstrong. "We want to have a bigger voice for change in this country."

ISSUES TO ISSUE GUIDELINES

Policy Statement to Congressional Action by Carter

By BINDER
New York Times

Sept. 13—President Carter today announced a comprehensive policy statement on nuclear energy and nuclear power, setting national guidelines for the United States.

High-ranking Administration officials said today that the statement would be issued in response to mounting pressure from Congress and the public to consider legislation on nuclear technology.

The nuclear policy statement was issued by Jimmy Carter, the presidential contender.

A study group headed by the deputy administrator of the Atomic Energy Commission and Development completed a 50-page report on nuclear energy options last Tuesday.

The report would be a White House draft statement, although the report's contents are being disputed by some officials concerned with nuclear energy.

Mr. Carter he said: "I am clearly apprehensive about the nuclear energy program—already made subject on May 13."

As Action
An official noted that the Atomic Energy Commission would introduce a bill tomorrow to limit foreign nuclear technology and nuclear power.

Mr. Carter said the Rhode Island committee, which he formed to study the issue, will report on a course of action next week.

Mr. Carter said, the Ford administration has become concerned about American nuclear technology and development.

Mr. Carter said the growing dependence on foreign oil and fuel is no longer a threat to their own atomic energy program.

Mr. Carter said the nuclear energy program has been in a "mud-slinging" phase for 10 years.

Mr. Carter said a central aspect of the nuclear energy program is the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel.

Schorr Says Earlier Publication Of Pike Report Obviates Inquiry

By RICHARD D. LYONS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—In refusing to disclose how he obtained the Pike committee's intelligence report, Daniel Schorr will charge before the House ethics committee Wednesday that the investigation is irrelevant, since most of the document was published by The New York Times before it appeared in The Village Voice.

The legal position of Mr. Schorr, a CBS news correspondent here who has been under suspension by the network since he disclosed that he had given a draft copy of the report to The Voice, was outlined in a memorandum sent to the committee today by his lawyer, Joseph A. Califano.

Mr. Schorr is to testify in public before the ethics panel Wednesday. At a committee hearing tomorrow, four Congressional aides are scheduled to be questioned under oath for the second time.

Mr. Schorr will also contend that when he received a draft copy of the report, the special intelligence panel had already agreed to make the document public, that no conditions had been imposed on its publication and therefore he had violated no rule by the House.

House Voted Secrecy

The report of the special intelligence committee, headed by Representative Otis G. Pike, Democrat of Suffolk County, contained details and criticism of the operations of the Central Intelligence Agency and other Federal intelligence agencies. The House voted in January to keep the report secret, and in February, The Village Voice printed extensive excerpts from the document.

Accompanying the memorandum prepared by Mr. Califano were copies of each page of the newspaper's published account annotated to show that most of the material had first been disclosed elsewhere, primarily in The Times.

"This previously published or broadcast material constitutes an enormous portion of The Village Voice version of the Select Committee's final report," the memorandum said. The rest, according to the memo, "was a matter of public record or would have been common knowledge either to the public generally or to those

"A basic factual predicate for this committee's broader investigation is that The Village Voice contained classified information which was both secret and harmful to national security," the memo con-continued. "But the information was neither."

The accounts referred to were published in The Times, starting Jan. 20, and made extensive references to the report's contents. Mr. Schorr first broadcast his accounts of material in the report on Jan. 25. The first account in The Village Voice appeared on Feb. 16.

Today's memorandum to the ethics committee reiterated Mr. Schorr's position that he "has a constitutional right under the free press clause of the First Amendment not to disclose the identity of his confidential news source."

As a further defense, the memo stated that "Mr. Schorr violated no resolution, rule or regulation of the House of Representatives in making the select committee's final report available in The Village Voice."

Describes Its Policy on Releasing Unlisted Phone Numbers to Law Enforcement Agencies

MEISLIN
The Bell Telephone Company and Telegraph and Telephone companies have never been articulated by the company who requested that published, a compar- light after complaints over the weekend by Representative Bella S. Abzug, Democrat of Manhattan, that the New York Telephone Company provides unlisted telephone numbers on demand to almost 50 Federal, State and local agencies, ranging from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Central Intelligence Agency to the city's Taxi and Limousine Commission. "We treat the information as confidential as far as we're concerned, and we only release it under valid legal process," said the spokesman, Donald Raymond. The company defines "valid legal process" as subpoenas, search warrants, administrative summonses and "lawful demand," Mr. Raymond said. It is under the "lawful demand" provision that most of the telephone numbers are provided, he added. "Generally, we recommend that companies ask for a valid legal process such as a subpoena," Mr. Raymond continued. "If the agency has a law enforcement function, they will ask that they get a letter from [the agency] on their stationery, signed by the head of the agency or an official of the agency." Mr. Raymond said that the tariffs regulating telephone company activities require that unpublished telephone numbers not be listed in the directory and not be given out by operators. But he said that giving an unlisted telephone number to a government agency is not prohibited. It is not known how many of the Bell System's 23 affiliated companies follow its guidelines on unlisted numbers. According to telephone company figures, about 12 percent of the nation's residential numbers, and about 25 percent of those in New York City, are unpublished. In New York City, Michael Clendenin, assistant vice president for public affairs of New York Telephone, said the company was "simply trying to cooperate with lawful authorities."

"It's never been an issue before," he said, "but it is a suitable subject for Congressional discussion. If the Congress enacts legislation that changes the ground rules, we'll certainly comply with it." He said the company required a letter of confirmation from an agency requesting an unpublished number, and that such letters were kept on file for six months. He added that the company would advise customers with unpublished numbers, at their request, what agencies had obtained their numbers in the previous six months. Mrs. Abzug, a candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination in New York, based her criticism of the company's policy on research by the House Government Information and Individual Rights Subcommittee, of which she is chairman. "It is shocking that the privacy of customers receives so little consideration," she said, "and it is truly adding insult to injury to charge millions of dollars a year for supposedly keeping these numbers unlisted." Mr. Raymond of A.T.&T. said that the service charge for unlisted numbers—93 cents a month in New York—covers the additional cost of keeping the number out of directories and unavailable to operators.

Fire Cuts Power, Strands Thousands In Downtown Area

By DAVID F. WHITE

Thousands of workers in seven office buildings near the Battery were affected yesterday by a series of power blackouts that trapped some in elevators, forced the evacuation of others from offices and left large crowds milling about on sidewalks, unable to return from lunch hours.

A fire in a 14th-floor transformer vault at 55 Water Street just before 1 o'clock caused a partial loss of power in the 51-story skyscraper and forced the evacuation of about 200 people from the building, according to the fire department. "I was at a meeting," said Michael Yankemchuk, an employee of the Securities Industries Automation Corporation on the 21st floor. "We were told to leave. You could smell the smoke and see it. It was an atrocious smell. You couldn't work in that atmosphere."

Fire Quickly Put Out

No injuries were reported as a result of the fire, which was extinguished quickly, according to the Fire Department. Damage to the transformer vault was described as "light to medium."

At six other buildings nearby, electrical power was lost, cutting off lights, elevators, air-conditioning, computers and other services.

At One State Street Plaza, which lost power for about an hour, mechanics had to crawl through elevator shafts to inform 20 people trapped in two elevators that a power failure had occurred, according to Harry Murray, head elevator starter at the building. "The whole lobby went black," he said. "The elevators went out. The mechanics

By ROBERT E. TOMASSON

A 22-year-old man who was clubbed in the head last Wednesday night during a gang attack on blacks and Hispanic people in Washington Square Park died Sunday night without regaining consciousness.

Marcos Mota, whose address was not available, died at 8:15 P.M. in St. Vincent's Hospital of head injuries, just four days after the attack by a gang of 20 to 30 youths and young men.

Last Friday, 10 young men and a 14-year-old boy were arrested for the assaults, in which 14 persons were injured. Four of the injured were hospitalized.

The 10 adults, who were released on bail following their arraignment on charges of assault, riot in the first degree, reckless endangerment and unlawful assembly, due to appear in Manhattan Criminal Court this morning.

A spokesman for the Manhattan District Attorney's office said that "since there's now a death, you can't change the charges."

The attack occurred in Washington Square Park, dashing toward the Avenue and then ran south park.

On their rampage, which then 10 minutes, members swung bats, chains and pipes, using racial epithets.

There has been speculation, unconfirmed reports by police, that the assault stems from an earlier incident in which youths got into a fight with dealers they accused of marijuana.

Senior police officials investigating have contented that the incident was more a neighborhood racial confrontation instigated by a local group of outsiders.

were rushing in, and the police were rushing in."

The other buildings affected were 1 Battery Park Plaza, 15 Broad Street, 2-12 Bridge Street and Nos. 9-12 and 24 State Street. No injuries were reported at any of them.

Consolidated Edison said it did not know immediately what had caused the blackouts. However, spokesmen said the utility had been having trouble since yesterday with feeder cables for its Bowling Green network, which serves the seven buildings and others in the area. Service was restored to all of the buildings later in the afternoon, but they resumed operations on a reduced basis.

Devout Catholic and Unionist

Francis Kenneth Joseph Bannon

By REGINALD STUART
Special to The New York Times

DETROIT, Sept. 13—It was 9:30 A.M., and negotiators for the Ford Motor Company and the United Automobile Workers were about to begin another round of bargaining talks on a new three-year contract for the 165,000 Ford workers represented by the union. Suddenly, it was realized that the talks could not begin because Kenneth Bannon, the chief union negotiator for Ford employees, had not shown up.

"Where's Ken?" one of the participants asked.

"At mass, of course," an aide to Mr. Bannon answered.

Francis Kenneth Joseph Bannon, 62 years old, has come to be known over the years as a man who takes two things, in addition to his wife and three children, seriously—his Catholicism and the U. A. W.

"Perhaps the two go together—being devout to a cause or belief," said Douglas A. Fraser, a long-time friend of Mr. Bannon and chief negotiator for the union at the Chrysler Corporation.

Mr. Bannon, born in Scranton Pa., June 27, 1914, rarely misses mass, he says. And according to close associates and his wife, the former Alice McHale, who says that he has worked for 16 hours or more a day for about as long as she can remember, Mr. Bannon rarely misses a chance to help to improve the lot of the automobile worker. He's been doing that since he quit his job painting boats along the Rouge River near here and went to work at the huge Ford Rouge plant in the fall of 1936.

"When you worked at Ford and saw how people were treated, it angered the living daylight out of me," said Mr. Bannon.

Became Inplant Organizer

Shortly after he started work at Ford, Mr. Bannon became an inplant organizer. He was involved in many of the disturbances that occurred before the first U.A.W.-Ford agreement was reached on June 20, 1941. After a stint in the Navy in World War II, he returned to the union ranks at Ford and in 1946 was elected president of Local 400.

A year later, the international appointed him director of the U. A. W. Ford Department, a post he still holds. And in 1970 he was elected a vice president of the union.

As head of the Ford unit, Mr. Bannon has negotiated 11 national contracts. In recent years, he said, he has negotiated pacts for the children of men he used to work with.

Two of those 11 Ford contracts, which were adopted by the other big auto makers, are considered milestones in union-management work pacts.

In 1949, Mr. Bannon and his negotiating team, working closely with the late U. A. W. president, Walter P. Reuther, won management acceptance of a pension plan, one of the first in the nation for hourly employees. And in 1955, again under Mr. Bannon's leadership, the union won acceptance by Ford of the Supplemental Unemployment Benefits program.

Under this approach to a guaranteed annual income, companies contribute to a special fund from which laid-off workers are paid a portion of their regular salary. The SUB, as it is called, is credited with easing the effects of the 1974-75 recession. At the height of the layoffs, more than 275,000 auto workers were unemployed.

"Years ago, we used to be concerned about how do we get the boss off our backs," Mr. Bannon said. "While that is still a concern, emphasis has shifted to 'How do we get guarantees against what happened in 1974 and 1975?'"

Job and income security in this negotiating round rank almost equal with wage increases, union officials say, and because Ken Bannon has a good record in expanding new concepts, there is optimism that he will achieve results in these negotiations.

"Ford has definite respect for the man," said Robert Battle 3d, director of the Region 1A Local here and a long-time friend of Mr. Bannon's. "He's a warm and compassionate man who is also a real hard hitter across the table. He can get intense."

pany's previous proposal, and it appeared to fall short of what the workers would receive if the present wage formula were simply extended.

Although the talks were continuing, there was no sign that round-the-clock bargaining was about to begin. The onset of marathon negotiating has generally been taken, in the past, as a signal that a settlement might be near. But Mr. McKenna said that no further meetings had been scheduled for tonight, and that tomorrow was "open."

Those hoping for the "major miracle" looked primarily to Henry Ford 2d, chairman of the company, to take a personal hand, though not necessarily at the bargaining table, to break the talks open.

Mr. Ford, for what was said to be the first time, was absent from a meeting of the corporation that is building the Renaissance Center, the multimillion-dollar riverfront development that the company chairman is spearheading to revitalize downtown Detroit. He held discussions from time to time during the day with members of the company bargaining team.

Woodcock Cancels Appearance

Mr. Woodcock canceled an appearance before a meeting of the Michigan State AFL-CIO.

Ordinarily, when negotiations get to a crucial stage, the parties clamp a "no-work" lockout on proceedings. No such lockout was proclaimed tonight.

Over the weekend, the talks were split in two, with one group—the highest officials on both sides—dealing with money matters, and another group with economic matters.

Ford is the "target" corporation in the union's attempt to force a favorable settlement. The union attempts to put economic pressure on the company it out as a strike target. That a strike would cut that production at the beginning of the model year, thereby putting the company at a competitive disadvantage. Once company settles, the union extends the pattern to the industry as a whole.

Boston Taxi Drivers Call To Protest Limousine

BOSTON, Sept. 13 (UPI)—Taxi drivers, irate at Mayor Kevin White's refusal to give them the power to late competitive limousine service tonight to begin citywide.

A rally of some 200 of the licensed cabbies lined up to strike until all limousines were barred from Logan International Airport.

By 8 P.M. virtually no cabs were at the airport—incoming and outgoing—and strike leaders predicted the boycott would be just a citywide by morning.

Last week cabbies boycotted for three days to protest the one limousine company, the and Limousine Company, to of Logan. An attempted city however, failed for lack of The Massachusetts Port which runs the airport, agreed to reconsider its approval service and Mayor White would sign a home rule petition control of limousine's from Department of Public Utilities the city. But today Mayor White refused to sign the petition.

WHITE HOUSE GETS BILL ON A NONPOLLUTING AUTO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (UPI)—The Senate gave final Congressional approval today to a five-year program intended to develop a fuel-saving, nonpolluting automobile.

The Senate voted 58 to 19 to send the compromise measure to the White House. The bill had passed the House last Aug. 31.

The Automotive Transport Research and Development Act would authorize $100 million in the first two years of the program that would be administered by the Energy Research and Development Administration.

Before passage, the assistant Republican leader in the Senate, Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, argued that the task of developing a nonpolluting automobile was the private sector's.

But Senator Frank E. Moss, Democrat of Utah, said that the job of developing an alternative to the internal combustion engine should be done by "someone who does not have any economic stake" in the project.

U.S. Envoy and Israel's Premier Meet on Suez Oil-Drilling Rights

Special to The New York Times

TEL AVIV, Sept. 13—Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and the United States Ambassador, Malcolm Toon, met here today for the third time in six days to discuss a dispute concerning oil-prospecting rights in the Israeli-controlled half of the Gulf of Suez.

Earlier this month an Israeli warship fired at buoys surrounding an American drilling rig in the Gulf of Suez, off the coast of Sinai.

The United States position is that the capture of Sinai in the 1967 war gave the Israelis control, but not title, to the eastern half of the Gulf of Suez. Accordingly, Washington holds a contract granted by the Egyptian Government permitting the Amoco oil company to explore anywhere in the Gulf.

SONY PRESENTS THE NEXT THING.

Sony's Betamax Video-tape Deck: It lets you see shows you would have missed.

You're looking at Betamax, a revolutionary new product from Sony that plugs into any TV and enables you to see programs you would have otherwise missed.

We'll explain. First off, let's take a situation where there are two shows on opposite each other and you'd like to watch both of them. Well, believe it or not, now you can. Because Sony's Betamax deck can actually videotape something off one channel while you're watching another channel. Then, when you're finished watching one show, all you do is push some buttons and you can play back a tape of the show that you would have missed.

Pretty incredible, huh? Well, listen to something else the tape or if you a library.

TV PICTURE SIMULATED

Betamax does that's equally incredible.

Let's say you have to go somewhere, or do something, at a time when there's something on TV you want to see. Well, Sony's Betamax is equipped with a timer that can be set to automatically videotape that program while you're not there. Then, whenever you want, you just play back the tape—and again you see what you would have missed.

Set the timer and automatically videotape something while you're doing something else.

(Our one-hour tapes, by the way, are reusable—just record over them and use them over and over again. Or, if you prefer, don't record over them and build a library of your favorite shows.)

Imagine. With Sony's Betamax, you'll never again miss a program you want to see. Ah, progress!

Betamax plugs into any TV, even if it's not a Sony (though you'll be missing a lot if it's not).

TWA. It's the businessman's air ir

The airline passenger today usually has a choice of airlines to the same destination. It's a fact of life for TWA, United or American. But while we all face competition, TWA faces the most.

We're concentrated in large metropolitan airports where competition is keenest. United and American pick up much of their business in Best because TWA has the best on-time record.

TWA has beaten American and United's on-time record for the last 15 months through the latest reporting period, June 1976.

These statistics are shown in CAB records for flights actually flown and include the busiest city-to-city flight segments representing 55% of TWA's available seat miles and 70% since May.

The record shows that TWA has the best on-time performance on more routes where we compete with American or United — based on percent of arrivals within 15 minutes of schedule.

And we're committed to doing even better. In fact, we're out to be on time every time we fly, everywhere we fly... to cities like...

Best because TWA has more carry-on luggage compartments.

TWA is the airline that introduced carry-on luggage compartments. And we still have more full-size carry-on compartments than American or United.

We have them on fully 99% of all our flights. So if you like to take your luggage on the plane with you, the plan to take is TWA's.

N.A.A.C.P. Board Allows Wilkins To Remain in Job Till Next Aug. 1

By THOMAS A. JOHNSON

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People avoided a major internal struggle yesterday when its board of directors agreed to allow Roy Wilkins to remain as executive director through July 31, 1977.

A formal agreement between Mr. Wilkins and the board also called for an administrator to take over most of the 75-year-old civil rights leaders' duties immediately. The administrator is to report directly to the board.

Split Grew Serious

The agreement has halted an escalating dispute. Mr. Wilkins wins the right to retire after the 68th annual convention in his home town, St. Louis. He had often expressed the desire to remain in office until then.

The board, for its part, has asserted itself publicly as the association's elected and appointed leader without a public wrangle with Mr. Wilkins, whose name is synonymous with the organization.

A serious split was developing in the 500,000-member organization and in the 64-member board itself over whether Mr. Wilkins should be relieved in December or next July.

Gloster Current, a 63-year-old former director of branches for the association, was appointed administrator.

Dr. Mootague Cobb, the association's president, said during a news conference that Mr. Current's appointment as administrator did not mean that he would be promoted to the executive director's job.

Dr. Cobb, who heads the board's search committee, said he hoped to announce the selection of an "executive director designate" in January. The new appointee would take over the 67-year-old civil rights group on Aug. 1, 1977.

The association's statement said: "The agreement provides that the effect of the arrangement be to give Mr. Wilkins administrative leave and free him to devote his full time and energies to functions involving formulation or administration of the program of the association in relation to those outside the national office and particularly to the urgency created by the Mississippi crisis of survival."

The "crisis" is a recent Mississippi court ruling ordering the N.A.A.C.P. to pay 12 merchants in the town of Port Gibson more than $1.2 million as a result of a boycott lead by association members in 1966. Before appealing the judgment, the association must raise cash to post a bond for 125 percent of the judgment.

Except for the fact that Mr. Current, the administrator, will report directly to the board, the board action will apparently have little effect on the staff at the association's national headquarters at 1790 Broadway.

Mr. Current had assumed more and more of the top level duties following the death in 1974 of Dr. John A. Morsell, the former assistant executive director.

Joined Association in 1936

A 30-year association employee, Mr. Current is a former professional musician who joined the N.A.A.C.P. in 1936 to work with youth councils in Detroit.

Since 1946, Mr. Current, who has a masters degree in public administration from Wayne State University, has headed the national organization's department of branches. During his tenure, the number of branches has increased from 500 to the present 1,700.

Later in the day, the board members directed the chairman, Mrs. Margaret Bush Wilson, to create "a national task force on Africa for the guidance of its members and the nation."

The board also adopted a resolution "commending" Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger for his current efforts in seeking a peaceful solution for politically troubled regions in southern Africa.

This marks the first time a major black organization has publicly praised Mr. Kissinger's current campaign, although the Secretary has been recently trying to build a constituency for the Ford Administration's essentially new Africa policy.

's Compromise Proposal on Ordination of Women Stirs Varying Reactions at Episcopal Convention

LEANOR BLAU
The New York Times
Sept. 13—The compromise proposal by the Presiding Bishop that women be ordained in areas that have evoked strong but reactions from delegates at the convention here.

tion, found the suggestion "very helpful." He said, "A lot of people are in the middle on this," adding that the proposal was "very realistic," given the diversity of church membership.

And there were those who were confused or undecided. Marge Austin of Sauk Centre, Minn., an alternate delegate to the triennial meeting of Episcopal women being held in conjunction with the convention, remarked, "I don't know if it's a good idea."

Favors Theory

Though she probably favors women's ordination, Mrs. Austin said, "I don't know if I would really like a woman to be my own priest."

James Wattley, executive secretary of the Coalition for the Apostolic Ministry, a group formed to oppose women's ordination, rejected the proposal, saying it would be "more like living in a duplex under one roof perhaps, than living in one house."

Even among those who dislike the proposal, there was disagreement about it. Bishop Paul Moore Jr. of New York said it would be "discriminatory," but "I'd rather have it than nothing at all."

Mrs. Smith found the proposal worse than a vote against women's ordination, "because it's a question that can be faced again, but I want it faced squarely."

Agreeing that it would "not face up to issues we came here to face," J. Stuart

Wetmore, the Suffragan Bishop of New York, said: "It would be a great and unwelcome change for us. People would be ordained to a locality and not a church. It would be a fragmentation of the church in what ought to be its central core."

Implementation Unclear

Nobody was sure just how the compromise would be effected, and Bishop Allin said at a news conference last night that he did not know, either. "I was not coming in, as it were, with the Allin Plan," he said, adding that he had hoped the opposing sides would work out details together so that "the two wings in this household continue to live in love and respect for each other."

Acknowledging that he had "never been convinced theologically" that women should be ordained to the priesthood, he said there was "something more important than that." The chief thing, he said, was to "affirm faith instead of constantly using our energies to out-manuever each other."

"You know," he added later with a smile, "God is going to judge us by the way we treat each other. Some may go to hell over this thing."

Second Controversy

The Bishop's reference was to the other controversial issue before this convention—a proposed new prayer book—but the message was the same.

Suggesting that the 1928 Book of Common Prayer now in use continue as an option, even if the proposed revision is accepted during this triennial session and in 1979, he noted that an 1893 version of the book had never been prohibited. "They just kind of quit using it," he said.

"For the life of me, I cannot understand how mature people, congregations, can't have some choice," the 55-year-old Bishop continued. "I just don't have the desire to urge them not to use the book—I was married with that book."

The women's issue is expected to come before the House of Bishops Wednesday morning, and before the delegates after the bishops vote.

POLL SAYS FEWER ADULTS ARE REGISTERING TO VOTE

Voter registration, an indication of political interest, is at its lowest point since 1948, according to the latest Gallup Poll. Only 71 percent of the nation's adults are registered to vote, according to a survey of 1,287 people who were at least 18 years old. A similar survey in 1973 indicated that registration was at 75 percent. In 1968, it was at 77 percent.

The latest poll indicated that 81 percent of the nation's Republicans were registered, compared to 75 percent of the Democrats. Four years ago, each party had about 81 percent registration among its adherents.

As was the case in 1972, the survey this year indicated that adults from ages 18 to 29 had the poorest registration record. Only 50 percent of them were registered, compared to 72 percent of those 30 to 49 years old and 85 percent of those 50 or older.

7 Are Nominated by President To National Science Foundation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—President Ford nominated seven persons today to be members of the National Science Board for terms expiring in 1982.

They are Raymond L. Bisplinghoff, chancellor of the University of Missouri; Lloyd Miller Cooke of White Plains, director of urban affairs and university relations for the Union Carbide Corporation; Herbert D. Doan of Midland, Mich., director and president of Doan Associates; and John R. Hogness, president of the University of Washington.

Also William F. Hoge Jr., deputy vice president and dean, Institute of Agriculture, Forestry and Home Economics, University of Minnesota; Marian E. Koshland, professor of bacteriology and immunology, University of California; and Alexander Rich, professor of biophysics, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

in refrigeration and air conditioning machinery. The committee said the various uses of the gases "are of very different magnitude and of very different importance to human life, including human health."

Committee on Impacts Change, said the potential might be the greatest, however, that this judge now.
said use of fluorocarbons in the United States and world increased steadily through 1974, but, has about three-quarters of is for propellant in spray cans. The gases much smaller amounts, amount of effect the fluorocarbons have on the ozone layer. Continued release at the 1973 level, they said, is calculated to give an ultimate reduction in ozone of about 7 percent. The likely range of possibilities is between 2 percent and 20 percent, they said. It would take many decades for this degree of depletion to occur.

Ultimately, this could be expected to increase the skin cancer rate, particularly among whites living in middle-latitude countries such as the United States.

Speakers at the news conference said, however, that such effects to date are believed to be extremely small and that even the ultimate effect would be only a fraction of the added amount of skin cancer in the United States since World War II that has accompanied changes in lifestyle. Dr. Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, a skin specialist at Harvard Medical School, said the evidence is strong that excessive exposure to sunlight can cause skin cancer in susceptible persons and that Americans' postwar tendency to spend more time in the sun covered by less and less clothing is a factor in the increase.

Most common forms of skin cancer are usually curable. Of more concern, according to speakers today, is a form of cancer called melanoma. The relationship of melanoma skin cancer to sunlight is less clear, although a relationship is believed to exist.

Predict Rise in Melanoma
The committee concluded that an increase in melanoma deaths is likely, but not certain, to occur as a consequence of increased ultraviolet light from the sun caused by ozone depletion. A 7 percent ultimate reduction in ozone — which would take more than 80 years to achieve at the 1973 rate of fluorocarbon release — would add a few hundred deaths a year from melanoma.
The report said two important scientific discoveries concerning the effects of fluorocarbons were made last year. The first was the observation that the chemicals are sufficiently effective absorbers of infrared light so that they might have an appreciable effect on the earth's heat.

The other was a discovery concerning the decomposition of a compound called chlorine nitrate by ultraviolet light that suggested a slower process of ozone depletion.

The committee concluded that a delay of two years in beginning regulatory action would be acceptable, but that longer delays should not be permitted even if scientific uncertainties still existed.

Industry spokesmen expressed satisfaction at the recommendation of a two-year waiting period by the committee. Industry generally takes the view that the ozone-depletion theory is still unproved and that the uncertainties need to be resolved before action is taken against the chemicals, which represent a market of several billion dollars a year.
Natural Resources Defense Council Inc.,

on the other hand, urged Federal agencies to take immediate steps against fluorocarbon compounds in spray cans. The council, an environmentalist group, said evidence in the long-awaited report from the academy warrants immediate action.

Two reports were made public today by the Academy. One was from the full committee, the other from its panel on atmospheric chemistry. They will be available in about a month.

Reagan Will Help Gov. Thomson
CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 13 (UPI)—Ronald Reagan will visit New Hampshire on Oct. 1 to help the state Republican Party and to help "his good friend, Gov. Meldrim Thomson," the Governor's campaign office said today. The Governor is seeking re-election. His office said plans were still sketchy but that Mr. Reagan might make two speeches, one in Concord and one in Manchester.

Why the fastest way to Tokyo is also the fastest way to Hong Kong, Osaka, Seoul, Manila, Okinawa, Taipei, and Singapore.

It's really quite simple. Pan Am's daily non-stop 747 SP from New York gets you to Tokyo over 2 hours faster than any other airline. Once in Tokyo you can continue on Pan Am to Hong Kong or Osaka. Or if you'd like, you can get convenient connections (without losing the 2 hours you've saved) on another airline going to Seoul, Okinawa, Taipei, Manila, or Singapore. Now that you know why it's the fastest flight, we'd like to tell you why it's the most comfortable flight. For those of you who like the idea of eating in a fine restaurant, there is our first class upper-deck dining room. There are 2 sittings (one for lunch, one for dinner) with a choice from 4 entrees at each meal. Like in a fine restaurant, it's best to reserve a table. (You should reserve a table when you reserve your flight.) If you're traveling economy, at lunch and dinner you have a choice from 3 entrees from our international menu of Oriental or Continental entrees. If you'd like to take a walk after dinner, go ahead. The 747 SP is one of the roomiest planes in the air. Maybe you'd like to take in one of the two movies we offer. There's no charge in first class, a nominal charge of $2.50 in economy. Although we try to give you every convenience in flight, we can't put you up on the plane every night, so we've arranged a low price hotel program. YOU CAN SAVE UP TO 20% ON OUR HOTEL DEAL. There was a time when hotel bargains were available only to air travelers who bought a tour. Now businessmen (or any Pan Am passenger) can take advantage of a hotel deal. And save themselves up to 20% compared with the published offerings of other major airlines, for the same hotels. Pan Am's "Pacific on a Pass" program takes in 85 first class or deluxe hotels in 29 cities in 15 countries in the Pacific. You and your travel agent will be able to calculate the instant savings available on the hotels you select because it takes in the little extras that add up. Like local taxes and service charges, and some other benefits you might want to find out for yourself. Just ask your travel agent for Pan Am's "Pacific on a Pass" program, PAH 575. He'll fill you in on the details and conditions, and take care of the rest.

Ford to Delay Ads on TV Until After First Debate

By JOSEPH LELYVELD
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—President Ford's strategists have decided not to start his campaign advertising on television until three days after his first debate with Jimmy Carter, even though this means that such commercials for the Democratic nominee will have a head start.

Mr. Carter's first commercial of the season was broadcast on Sept. 2 on CBS. "Why not get at the electorate when it is fluid?" asked the candidate's advertising man, Gerald Rafshoon, who showed himself to be a firm believer in early starts in the primary campaign.

In part, the decision to start the Ford commercials on Sept. 26 reflects the importance the President's camp attaches to the debate. By waiting, the Ford campaign can hope to use the advertising in a carefully calculated way to sustain whatever seems to be most positive in the impression left by the President in his encounter with his rival.

But the delay also makes a virtue of necessity, for Mr. Ford's advisers did not begin to think about their television campaign this fall until after he had defeated Ronald Reagan for the Republican nomination.

The commercials were filmed on Mr. Carter's patio in Plains, Ga., last November when few people outside the candidate's immediate circle considered him a serious factor in this year's race. Much has happened since then, but the four statements, each about 45 seconds long, are the only statements on specific issues that will appear in Carter commercials before the first debate.

Mr. Rafshoon filmed other issue statements in Mr. Carter's book-lined study in Plains this summer and says that they may be used later in the campaign. The reason they are being withheld now, he says, has nothing to do with their content.

The reason is, he says, that the film made this summer failed to establish the feeling of "empathy" between the candidate and the viewers that Mr. Rafshoon finds in the earlier film. A clue to the difference is that Mr. Carter wears a necktie and sometimes a suit jacket in the recent film; in the old film, he wears an open-neck sports shirt and jogging sneakers.

'Too Presidential'
Mr. Rafshoon says that it is not good for the candidate to appear too "Presidential" now.

Other issue statements in commercials, he says, might be taken from the debates themselves. When they agreed on the debates, the representatives of the two candidates also agreed that film of the encounters could be used in subsequent television advertising as long as each campaign showed only its candidate and not his opponent in its television spots.

The bulk of the commercials on network television for both campaigns will be five-minute or 60-second spots. By a quirk of network rate schedules, the 60-second spots are normally about three times as expensive in prime time as the longer spots. The reason is that the shorter spots appear in breaks on top-rated shows, while the five-minute commercials are inserted at the end of shows and count only as program time.

Thus, on Sept. 27, the Carter campaign will have a 60-second spot on "Executive Suite" on CBS at a cost of $50,000. One week later, it will get five minutes at the end of the same show for $18,025. At comparable bargaining rates, Eugene J. McCarthy is planning to buy one five-minute spot on network television each week to promote his independent candidacy. The Communist Party has purchased five minutes on CBS, after the movie "Slither," on Sept. 17, to promote its candidate, Gus Hall.

Commercials More Costly
Despite the ceiling on campaign spending this year, the television exposure of the major candidates through their advertising will be at about the same level as in the 1972 campaign. Because of a rise in the rates, it will be significantly more costly.

The Carter campaign is planning to spend at least $5 million and probably $6.5 million on television on the networks and half in states with large numbers of voters and close contests.

According to Mr. Deardourff, more than half "will go to Carter."

"Our research tends to show that many people have a better opinion of Mr. Carter than they do of Mr. Deardourff said, except to stress the President's character. Everyone about Plains, he said, but for most voters is still a bit

In approaching Mr. Ford in the White House, Mr. Dole to portray him as a leader of the Oval Office. The Carter campaign seeks to impart a sense of by reminding viewers of a pair that existed in the result of the Watergate or

It is not easy to determine how much more expensive it would be to buy a ticket, he said, but it is not to reset the stage.

Finally, Mr. Deardourff of the Ford campaign's attack Mr. Carter directly commercials, emphasizing "empathy" and "studied vagueness" left by the film help to determine the extremes in such "negative

Carter, With Wallace at His Side, Hails South's Basic Conservatism

By JAMES T. WOOTEN
Special to The New York Times

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 13—With Gov. George C. Wallace at his side, Jimmy Carter reaffirmed his Southern heritage here today with an emphatic commitment to the region's indigenous conservatism.

"We Southerners believe in work, not welfare," the Democratic Presidential candidate told an exuberant crowd at a suburban shopping center—and the Alabama Governor, who seemed familiar with that concept, joined the audience in vigorous applause.

Mr. Carter, starting the second week of his general election campaign with a quick round of appearances here, became the first nominee of his party ever to seek votes in Alabama, a state that has not gone Democratic since 1960. Facing nothing but friendly faces wherever he went here today, he predicted that this year would be different, a feeling shared by most Democratic leaders in the state and a majority of the small businessmen and newspaper publishers with whom he met before leaving for Oklahoma and Arizona.

Continues Selective Attacks
Continuing his pattern of selective attacks on President Ford, Mr. Carter told the businessmen in his first speech today that the Small Business Administration had "deteriorated" under the Republicans and cited it as "one more example" of sloth and waste in the Federal Government.

While he once again identified himself with the party's past Presidents—Roosevelt, Truman, Johnson and Kennedy—and the expensive social-and-welfare programs born in their administrations, he was clearly more emphatic in his commitment to balanced Federal budgets, fiscal moderation, a sturdy national defense, a more efficient bureaucracy, and "an end to this welfare mess."

His themes today were an extension of his efforts last week to move himself from left to right in the perceptions of voters, and they fell on fertile ground here in the citadel of Governor Wallace's basic constituency.

Wallace Smiles Approval
Again and again, the Alabama Governor, who was once the South's most prominent politician, smiled and nodded his approval from his nearby wheelchair as Mr. Carter stirred his audience with refined echoes of familiar Wallace themes.

Mr. Carter assailed the tax system, calling it a "disgrace to the human race," and asserted that advantages for the wealthy cause hardships for the poor and the middle class.

He denounced the Federal bureaucracy, citing examples of its "inefficiency" and "lack of concern for the people it is supposed to serve."

And, after affirming the South's and his own belief in work as opposed to welfare, Mr. Carter said, "the South has always been extremely patriotic."

"I never have understood why. Maybe it's the aftermath of the War between the States," he said, "or the presence of so many military installations."

But, whatever the source of the patriotic instincts, Mr. Carter said it was good and pledged himself to a defense policy that would disallow any threats to national security.

Counter-Balancing Concepts
As he often does, the Democratic candidate also posed counter-balancing concepts in his speech. For example, he recommended that welfare recipients who cannot work should be treated with dignity and respect; and he suggested that military budgets are obese and therefore can be cut without endangering national security. But, for the most part, his audiences here in Birmingham heard the other side of his rhetoric.

From the moment he arrived in downtown Birmingham, Mr. Carter seemed at home. Governor Wallace's effusive praise of him during his introduction to the meeting of small businessmen enhanced the feeling.

"Oh, how I've longed to see a Deep Southerner, like you and me and Jimmy Carter, in the White House," Governor Wallace said.

However, Wallace himself, after the recent public disclosure of domestic problems with his wife, looked grim and regarded both at the hotel and later at the Century Plaza Shopping Center.

Mondale Speaks In Florida
WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 13—Senator Walter F. Mondale, the Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee, made a speech here this evening to a group of small-business owners that was very close to being a carbon copy of that delivered by Mr. Carter in Birmingham, Ala., earlier today.

Mr. Mondale also spoke about a Republican record of "disastrous economic mismanagement" that was causing small businesses "to vanish at an alarming rate." Mr. Mondale's aides here, as well as those reached by telephone at the Atlanta, Ga., headquarters of the Carter-Mondale campaign, said that the similarities were no coincidence and that the two speeches had been drafted "in close coordination."

One aide said that whenever the opportunity arose for both men to "develop a theme" by "hitting the same thing" on the same day, it would be done. Mr. Mondale also spoke to the residents of two senior citizens' condominiums here before flying on to Tampa, where he was scheduled to campaign tomorrow.

12 States Hold Primaries Today; Kennedy and Humphrey Opposed

By United Press International

Twelve states conduct primary elections today in the year's biggest day of selection for Congressional and state offices.

Most attention has been focused on New York, where five Democrats are seeking their party's nomination for the seat of Senator James L. Buckley, Conservative-Republican, and Mr. Buckley is opposed for re-election to the Republican line.

Two of the best-known members of the Senate—Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts—have primary contests today, but neither is expected to have difficulty in winning re-election.

Primary Rundown

A rundown of the primaries outside New York State follows:

Massachusetts—Mr. Kennedy is opposed for a third-term nomination by Democrats Robert Emmet Dinsmore and Frederick Langone, a City Council member. Both are opposed to school busing and Mr. Kennedy's usual Boston margins may be cut.

Minnesota—Mr. Humphrey has a little-known Democratic challenger in the Rev. Dick Bullock. Five Republicans, led by a college professor, Jerry Brekke, seek to oppose Mr. Humphrey, who is running for a fifth Senate term.

Rhode Island—Gov. Philip W. Noel is seeking the Democratic nomination to succeed retiring Senator John O. Pastore with the incumbent's endorsement. But the State Senate majority leader, John Hawkins, and a businessman, Richard Lorber, are pushing him. John Chafee, former Navy Secretary, will be the Republican candidate.

Vermont—Senator Robert T. Stafford has Republican opposition from John Welch Jr., Democratic Gov. Thomas P.

Salmon also has opposition in his effort to move to the Senate, from a public interest lawyer, Scott Skinner.

Nevada—Democratic Senator Howard W. Cannon is heavily favored over two challengers. A former Republican Representative, David Towell, is expected to beat S. M. Cavnar and Robert Charles for his party's nomination.

Wisconsin—Senator William Proxmire has only write-in opposition for the Democratic nomination, Stanley York also is without opposition for the Republican Senate nomination.

Utah—Senator Frank E. Moss has no Democratic opposition and will be opposed in November by either Jack Carlson or Orrin Hatch, who are seeking the Republican nomination. Two Democrats, John Creer and Scott Matheson, are contesting for the nomination to seek the seat of retiring Gov. Calvin L. Rampton, while Attorney General Vernon Romney and the State Senate Republican leader, Dixie Leavitt, are seeking the Republican nomination.

North Carolina—In a runoff primary, David Flaherty and Coy Privette seek the Republican nomination to succeed Gov. James E. Holshouser.

Wyoming—Senator Gale W. McGee has no Democratic opposition, and State Senator Malcolm Wallop is favored to beat Doyle Henry and Nels Larson for the Republican nomination.

New Hampshire—Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr., a Republican, has opposition for renomination from Gerard Zeiler, but is expected to win. Three Democrats are running to oppose. The Republican candidate.

Colorado—Representative Frank E. Evans, a Democrat, is the only incumbent with primary opposition.

AGING NEEDN'T LOWER I.Q. BEHAVIORAL STUDY FINDS

BAR HARBOR, Me., Sept. 13 (AP)—The idea that learning ability drops off as a natural consequence of old age was questioned last night by a behavioral scientist at a nationwide conference on genetics and aging.

Dr. Richard L. Spratt, a psychologist involved in behavioral studies at the Jackson Laboratory here, said his experimental evidence suggests that it is time to reassess the view that learning depends on age.

"Aging itself is not detrimental to learning ability and I.Q.," he said. "The key factor instead is the health of the individual as he grows older."

Dr. Spratt said advancing age generally brings poorer health, which results in loss of motor skills, interest and perceptual ability.

In his study, Dr. Spratt observed the same types of animals in maximum-learning environments throughout a full life span: five weeks, comparable to human childhood, to 30 months, which is equal to postretirement age.

He found that 90 percent of the animals in one group and 80 percent in the other group learned as well in very old age as they did when they were very much younger.

He concluded that learning ability and I.Q. do not decrease with age, but remain steady and perhaps even increase, depending on an individual's profession, interests and, most importantly, health.

CAN TWO DOCTORS BE CHEAPER THAN ONE?

Getting a second opinion on elective surgery may save money. We have a new program that offers a free second opinion by a certified specialist in cases of elective—non-emergency—surgery.

We've made this benefit available to all "experience-rated" groups of subscribers. A recent study cited by Congress reported that in 17.6% of the cases surveyed, a second specialist, when consulted, disagreed with an original opinion that favored surgery. That could save a lot of surgery. And a lot of money. We at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Greater New York are giving the idea a full-scale trial to see if indeed the second opinion will help us control costs.

Also, we see this second opinion as improving the quality of care being administered. More than costs alone are at stake. The patient is saved the surgery and also the worry. And, in the case of the second specialist agreeing, the patient would be greatly reassured. But savings in tests, surgery and hospital time could be considerable under this program, and better use of resources should result.

We're trying to eliminate unnecessary operations. Eliminating all of them may be too big a task. Some doctors have estimated that many tonsillectomies performed on children in this country may be unnecessary. And that's only one example. Ending even a majority of these operations is obviously a huge endeavor. But it's worth the effort. There are lives as well as monies to consider, and the beneficial effect on the patient's decision-making.

Our new program may be an answer to improving the quality of care, the use of facilities, the patient's peace of mind, and the cost situation. We're offering this program at no initial cost. We'd like it to be as widely accepted as possible. And if the results are favorable, we hope to extend it to all groups, not just the experienced-rated.

We call our program by the acronym of PRESSO (Program for Elective Surgical Second Opinion). It's the latest of our many efforts to contain costs and improve the quality of health care. If you're a member of an eligible Blue Cross and Blue Shield group, ask your employer or group administrator about PRESSO. If you're an employer, ask us.

We believe there's more to good health than just paying bills.

Meet SEN. Buckley

Senator James L. Buckley talked with Barbara Anastasi, holding her son, Michael, as he campaigned yesterday at a shopping center in Hicksville, L.I.

DEMOCRATS WIND UP 5-WAY SENATE RACE

reserved encounters among the five. There were few of the accusations and disagreements that had characterized earlier debates.

The candidates generally covered familiar ground, except for a question on whom they would support for Senate majority leader next January.

Three of them—Mrs. Abzug, Mr. Clark and Mr. O'Dwyer—preferred Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota. Mr. Hirschfeld declined to express a preference and Mr. Moynihan said that he would, in effect, bargain for a place on the Senate Finance Committee.

Mr. Moynihan and Mrs. Abzug, the generally conceded front-runners, nearly crossed paths even before last night's debate, when they campaigned a block apart in the garment center—symbolic of their strong bid for Jewish voters.

Both drew modest crowds, particularly in comparison with past garment center rallies. Mrs. Abzug had two groups of entertainers to drum up a crowd, while Mr. Moynihan had an aide with strong vocal chords and a microphone.

The last-day flights to all the major cities in the state, a feature of recent primaries, were passed up in the interests of economy. With the exception of Mr. Hirschfeld, who spent up to $750,000 of his own money, largely on television advertising, the campaigns were among the low budget operations in recent years.

Mr. O'Dwyer, trying to counter a shift away from his candidacy by many regular organization Democrats although he is the choice of the Democratic state committee, paraded various union, party and public officials in support of him before newsmen at his City Hall office.

Mr. Hirschfeld did not campaign at all yesterday, according to an aide.

The winner of the Democratic primary will face the winner of the Buckley-Peyser contest. Mr. Buckley is already assured of the Conservative Party's nomination, while the Liberal Party is expected to endorse the Democratic candidate.

Governor Remains Neutral

The state's top Democrats, including Governor Carey and Mayor Beame, remained neutral in the Senate contest. An exception was Lieut. Gov. Mary Ann Krupask, who has actively campaigned for Mrs. Abzug and did so yesterday in Buffalo.

The lieutenant governor was the only woman in a three-way Democratic primary two years ago, and won despite the opposition of most of the Democratic Party Establishment in the state. Mrs. Abzug similarly is opposed by most of the party Establishment.

The vote of women in the primary could be critical. The Abzug forces are counting on substantial support among women with the argument that there are no women Senators at present. Mrs. Abzug has emphasized this argument, which was muted earlier, in the final days of the campaign.

National defense is the closest to a substantive difference that has emerged in the campaign, with Mr. Moynihan taking a stronger position than his Democratic opponents on the need to maintain defense spending. Most of the opponents of Mr. Moynihan have called for substantial cuts in military spending.

Nader Corrects Statement

One unwitting participant in the Democratic contest, Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, issued a statement correcting a statement by Albert Shanker, the head of the United Federation of Teachers, in a Shanker column that was printed as an advertisement in The New York Times.

Mr. Shanker, a supporter of Mr. Moynihan, had quoted a 1972 critique of Mrs. Abzug in a Nader report. Mr. Nader said yesterday that the Abzug critique was "updated" in 1975 to praise her "legislative skill" and to note the respect accorded her by fellow legislators who have become "inured to her extravagant and abrasive style."

In two bitter Congressional contests involving Representatives Herman Badillo in the Bronx and Shirley Chisholm in Brooklyn, the Justice Department denied a request by the Badillo and Chisholm camps for Federal monitors to oversee the primary election in their districts.

The two representatives had raised the possibility of widespread fraud, but the Justice Department said that it would become involved only in the case of racial discrimination against voters.

Badillo and Velez Trade Charges Of 'Dictator' and 'Liar' in Debate

By DAVID VIDAL

In a climax to a bitter campaign, Representative Herman Badillo and Councilman Ramon S. Velez met in a spirited debate yesterday in which Mr. Badillo accused his challenger of running a "dictatorship" in the South Bronx that included "intimidation" of poverty workers.

Mr. Velez, in turn, accused Mr. Badillo, who has served three times in the House, of being a "liar" and of conducting a "smear campaign." He then challenged Mr. Badillo to turn over any evidence of wrongdoing by Mr. Velez to the authorities.

The contenders for the Democratic nomination for the 21st Congressional District seat in the South Bronx met in a hour-long debate at El Diario-La Prensa, a Spanish-language daily at 121 Hudson Street with a considerable readership among potential voters. The debate, however, was conducted in English.

Atmosphere Tense

The questions put to the candidates were asked by Harry Soloway, vice president of the newspaper, who served as moderator. It was at his request that the city's two foremost Puerto Rican political figures reluctantly shook hands at the end of the debate and posed, smiling, for a picture. But otherwise the pace was swift and the atmosphere tense.

Laughter broke out at one point. Luisa Quintero, columnist for El Diario-La Prensa, interrupted a reply to ask why a hum sounded over the microphone at times when Mr. Badillo spoke, while none was heard as Mr. Velez spoke. The problem was corrected, although in another incident the microphone briefly went dead on Mr. Velez.

The 50 or so people in the third-floor room included partisans of both men, their aides and community figures such as Joseph Monserrat, the educator; Assemblyman Armando Montano, who supports Mr. Badillo, and State Senator Israel Ruiz, who backs Mr. Velez.

Although the men had twice before met in debate—in two separate radio programs broadcast over the weekend, one in English and the other in Spanish—this was the first debate in the primary conducted before any sizable group. Numerous other attempts to bring the candidates together had failed over disagreement on the ground rules, including the language to be used.

Some Bitter Feelings

When asked whether the campaign would divide the Puerto Rican community, Mr. Badillo replied: "That of course is the purpose of the campaign, to see that I am eliminated from politics."

Mr. Velez, in his rebuttal, said: "Whoever is elected, then that's it, we should go on working together."

More than once, Mr. Velez proposed his idea of reconciliation no matter who won, but Mr. Badillo did not reciprocate, avoiding any direct response.

Mr. Badillo attacked Mr. Velez for being "100 percent in support of Beame policies that put the bankers ahead of the people," and said the issue of this campaign was "who is in the best position to represent the South Bronx and the Hispanic community without being indebted to any political organization."

Mr. Velez said the main issue was "the abandonment of the South Bronx, especially of the 21st Congressional District, and how we have no leadership in Congress to speak for us."

Both men said later that they expected to win.

Head of G.O.P. In Suffolk Says He'll Quit Jan. 1

By IVER PETERSON

Special to The New York Times
BLUE POINT, L.I., Sept. 13—The Suffolk County Republican committee chairman, Edwin M. Schwenk, declared today he would resign his party job in January. He has served for the last eight years.

Although he has twice threatened to resign in the past, Mr. Schwenk appeared to mean it this time. He has argued over party management with some members of the county's Republican executive committee, but when the committee announced its unanimous but regretful acceptance of his resignation, it pledged its "full loyalty and total support to Buzz Schwenk during the 1976 campaign."

Mr. Schwenk, a businessman with wide holdings in the county, stressed that he would continue to manage his party's political affairs through the general elections on Nov. 2, and would leave the executive committee 10 weeks after that to look for a successor before cleaning out his desk.

Democrats Now Stronger

"It's now time to cast away all doubts concerning my future with the party," Mr. Schwenk declared at a news conference in the country club setting of his county headquarters here. "We have an election to win, our State Assembly, State Senate and county are in need of more Republican voices, and the White House is in need of continued Republican leadership, and I intend to do my all, one more time."

Part of the stress on Mr. Schwenk in recent months has grown from the Democratic Party's increasing strength in this once solidly Republican county. The Republicans have lost two Congressional seats, and the County Legislature, for the first time in its seven-year history, fell to a Democratic majority last year.

A Democratic Drive Aims at Registering New York's Voters

By LINDA GREENHOUSE

Acting on the premise that an unregistered voter is a Democrat who got away, the New York State's top Democrats yesterday opened a drive to register 2.1 million voters in the three weeks left before registration closes for the Nov. 2 general election.

The group running the voter drive, the Committee for Two Million, is supposed to include some Republicans as well. But none was in evidence as Mayor Beame, Governor Carey, former Gov. W. Averell Harriman and former Mayor Robert F. Wagner, among others, went before the microphones at the New York Hilton Hotel to outline their plans for registering the electorate's flagging interest.

The 2.1 million figure refers to the number of dropouts among the state's voters since the 1972 Presidential election. In that year, 9.2 million New Yorkers were registered to vote. Last June, the number was down to 7.1 million.

Many of the 2.2 million are college students who voted for the first time in 1972 but have long since graduated and moved away. Anyone who moves between elections must re-register from the new address, similarly, anyone who has failed to vote in two successive November elections (not only Presidential elections) must register again.

Students to Get Forms

To reach the potential student voters, the Committee for Two Million has arranged with the administrations of most colleges in the state to include the one-page mail voter registration form in the enrollment packets students receive as they sign in for the new semester.

Other plans include distribution of the registration forms in banks, unemployment lines, and major sports events.

"When you go to see the Jets this year, you may have lots of time to fill out forms," Richard C. Wade, a political scientist who serves as a consultant to the Democratic State Committee, said at a news conference.

"Our challenge to everyone is to make it so easy to vote that to avoid the vote is an irresponsible act," Governor Carey said.

The registration forms must be mailed back in time to reach the Board of Elections by Oct. 4.

Basil A. Paterson, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, also attended the news conference, and indicated why Republican participation might be less than enthusiastic. Of the 55 million eligible voters who are now unregistered across the country, he estimated that 35 million would vote Democratic. Of 7.5 million eligible blacks who are unregistered, 6.5 million would be Democrats, Mr. Paterson said.

Friday to Be Citizenship Day

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—President Ford today designated Friday, Sept. 17, the 189th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution, as Citizenship Day. In a proclamation, he also designated the period from Sept. 17-23 as Constitution Week.

Assemblyman Stein Sued for Alleged Libel of Child Lunch Provider

By RICHARD J. MEISLIN

An affiliate of the B'nai Torah Institute, an organization that has been frequently assailed for its activities in the federally financed summer lunch program for children, filed a $6 million libel and slander suit yesterday against a critic, Assemblyman Andrew J. Stein, Democrat of Manhattan.

The affiliate, Special Programs for Americans, also issued a lengthy response to criticisms of it made in recent weeks by Representative Elizabeth Holtzman, Democrat of Brooklyn. But it did not include her in the lawsuit, the organization's attorney said, because "she was more circumspect in what she said."

"The last person to proclaim his innocence and issue a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against me was Bernard Bergman the nursing home operator," Mr. Stein said in response yesterday. "I was proven right in that instance, and I will be proven right in this case as well."

The libel suit—which asks for $3 million compensatory and $3 million punitive damages—arose from comments Mr. Stein made at a news conference last month. He charged that B'nai Torah was "systematically bilking the state out of millions of dollars" in its handling of the summer free-food program.

The program, financed by the United States Department of Agriculture and administered by the State Education Department, is designed to feed disadvantaged children as a summer counterpart to the school lunch program. The distribution of food is handled at the local level by nonprofit community organizations.

Mr. Stein, at his news conference last month, said Special Programs for Americans had been operating a "phantom" food distribution site—one that was receiving money, although food was not being delivered to it.

Representatives of the organization produced documents to dispute Mr. Stein at last month's news conference, and Mr. Stein conceded later that his "emphasis was wrong, as far as who was at fault on this particular charge." But he continued to charge improprieties at two other food distribution points run by Special Programs for Americans.

"Mr. Stein was aware that he might have goofed," said Lieb Pinter, chairman of B'nai Torah. "Nevertheless he made the same charge a few hours later in front of the TV cameras."

Miss Holtzman has issued statements in recent weeks implying that B'nai Torah and the private companies that supplied food to it were in collusion and entered into contracts in violation of competitive bidding laws.

In a statement at its news conference yesterday, B'nai Torah said its representatives "deny categorically" the Congresswomen's charges.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 13 (AP)—A 13-year-old girl was held today in the stabbing death of a woman in front of a crowd on a street corner here. The police withheld the girl, whose identity they said was Ramona Harmon, 18 years old, as they argued last night in the street.

YUGOSLAVIA ASSAILS U.S. ON JET HIJACKING

Says F.B.I.'s Yielding to Terrorist Demand to Distribute Statement to Press Was 'Unfriendly Act'

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
Special to The New York Times

BEGRAD, Sept. 13 — Yugoslavia, which has demanded American action against Yugoslav dissidents living in the United States, charged through its controlled press and broadcasts today that American "elements" were involved in the Croatian hijacking of an American airliner Friday.

Apart from attacks on the United States in the press here, the Yugoslav Government has submitted at least one high-level protest to Washington. Belgrade complained that the Federal Bureau of Investigation had not only failed to stop the terrorists, but had also complied with a terrorist demand that anti-Belgrade statements be distributed to American newspapers for publication.

The Yugoslav Government has officially described this as an "unfriendly act," a harsh diplomatic phrase that, in similar situations in other countries, has sometimes led to a break in diplomatic relations.

The Government news agency Tanjug set the tone in an editorial saying: "Plane hijacking in the United States is one of a series of anti-Yugoslav actions programmed by United States reactionary quarters, which oppose the development of friendly relations between the United States and Yugoslavia."

Enmity to Nonaligned Cited

The Communist Party newspaper Borba asserted that the hijacking, which was carried out by five Croatian separatists from La Guardia Airport in New York, was part of an American campaign to sabotage the work of "nonaligned" nations.

The hijacking ended in Paris Saturday when the Croatian terrorists surrendered to the French police without harming the plane or the passengers on board. A bomb they had left in Grand Central subway station exploded when being examined by the New York police, however, killing one policeman.

Yugoslavia has warned the United States that there is little chance of an improvement in relations between the two countries unless Washington complies with long-standing Yugoslav demands to move against Yugoslav critics of President Tito's Government living in America.

Specifically, Yugoslavia has long sought an exchange of information and cooperation with the F.B.I. in running down Yugoslav dissidents, an arrangement that Belgrade has achieved in West Germany and has sought in other countries, notably Australia and Canada.

United States authorities have repeatedly assured Belgrade that American law does not tolerate terrorism in any form, but that under the American Constitution, people may not be prosecuted for their political opinions or because they belong to a political organization.

'Hard Line' and Hijackings

State Department Altering Long-Held Policy, Possibly to Defer Criticism of Government Role

By RICHARD WITKIN

The weekend hijacking to Paris of a New York-to-Chicago airliner has accelerated a process of official rethinking on how to deal with terrorists while the lives of hostages are regarded to be in jeopardy.

The State Department is expressing its long-held "hard line" policy in altered terms, contending that the old way of stating the policy was often misunderstood. In the past, the policy has widely been publicized as: "We will not negotiate with terrorists."

A department official involved in anti-terrorist planning said yesterday that the preferred way of stating the policy was: "Do everything to effect the safe release of hostages without making any concessions."

News

Analysis

There was speculation in the aviation community that the public change in emphasis might have been designed to head off possible criticism about the role of governments in the maneuvering that ended the hijacking with no deaths or injuries to any one aboard the plane.

Only the Hijackers Knew

It must be considered that, while the events were being played out at the Paris airport, no one but the hijackers could know whether they had the devices in make good on threats to blow up the plane if their demands had not been met.

Several questions were being asked about the role of both the United States and French Governments.

Was the response of the State Department as rapid and realistic as it might have been? Or did a misunderstood view of the "we will not negotiate" stance cause unnecessary delays that might have led to tragedy if the hijackers had had lethal devices and had been trigger-happy?

As for the French, were authorities in Paris too quick to incapacitate the Trans World Airlines plane? Did they cause what, under different circumstances (armed hijackers with different motivations), might have been fatal delays in facilitating communications with the terrorists?

What Degree of Handling?

In short, what degree of tough governmental handling was called for if the only remaining requirement of the hijackers was to verify that their demand had been met for dissemination of their message in dropped leaflets and news columns?

The captain of the plane, Richard Carey, put it very succinctly when he asked during tower-to-cockpit radio exchanges in Paris: "Tell me, please, what are we being killed for?" A tape of the exchanges was obtained by the National Broadcasting Company.

At another point, the captain told the United States Ambassador, Kenneth Rush, who was in the control tower: "All we know is that these people had a message that they wanted to put in the papers and wanted to drop leaflets on cities, and for this you are asking that this whole ship full of innocent people can be killed to prove that you can take a stand against terrorists."

The hard-line approach to the overall problem of airline hijacking had received its greatest public acclaim after the Israeli commando raid that freed hostages at Uganda's Entebbe Airport earlier this year.

Demands Were Limited

But was any comparable governmental toughness called for in Paris? In the end, it was decided it was not, since the demands of the terrorists were limited. They were not asking the release of fellow terrorists in Israel and in other jails.

What then can officials here and abroad learn from the latest episode in the complex, constantly changing, and too frequently tragic history of aerial hijacking?

The dominant view among aviation experts at the moment is that there is nothing wrong in an officially proclaimed and normally implemented policy of toughness with hijackers. Anything less would only encourage other criminals.

But it is counterproductive to adopt too rigid a stand, many believe. A rigid "we will not negotiate" stand can be misinterpreted by middle-level officials to mean "we will not talk." Even a policy of "we will not make concessions" should not be absolute—how do you define "concessions"? Is the dropping of leaflets the kind of concession that warrants risking dozens of lives?

Each on Own Merits

In short, the majority view is that the government should talk and usually act tough but, at the same time, should treat each case on its own merits at the time.

That is the way, in the final analysis, that the weekend T.W.A. hijacking was handled. Even while a strict reading of Secretary of State Kissinger's "we will not negotiate" posture was slowing steps overseas to gain the release of the plane's passengers and crew, other branches of the government were experiencing no such rigidities.

Both the Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, for instance, were urging newspapers to comply with the hijackers' demands for printing the text of their manifesto for Croatian independence from Yugoslavia.

The policy favoring toughness with flexibility was endorsed by a spokesman for the West German United Nations delegation, which plans to propose new measures against taking hostages when the General Assembly meets later this month.

"In general, you should take a hard line," he said. "But don't say 'never.' You can always make room for special cases."

U. N. ACCORD SOUGHT ON HOSTAGE PROBLEM

West Europeans, Preparing Legal Convention, Seek to Bypass Antiterrorism Deadlock

By PETER GROSE
Special to The New York Times

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Sept. 13 — Leading West European governments are preparing a formal legal convention against the taking of hostages, for submission in the forthcoming General Assembly. The move is designed to bypass the emotional political deadlock that has stalled global antiterrorism measures for the last four years.

The hijacking of a United States airliner by Croatian nationalists Friday may significantly improve the chances for Assembly action at the session that opens Sept. 21; this latest incident can be cited to reassure suspicious Arab governments that antiterrorism efforts are not merely anti-Arab sentiments in disguise.

Antiterrorist statements in world councils have long been linked in many diplomats' minds with opposition to the Arab cause against Israel, largely because the impetus for action has often been hijackings or other assaults by radical Palestinians. In the words of a Western ambassador, it was a "historical tragedy" that this immobilizing linkage was allowed to go uncorrected.

A Careful Choice of Words

The European group, at the initiative of the West Germans, plans to direct its proposed convention specifically against the taking of hostages. The definitions and wording are being carefully chosen to reduce emotive associations—even the word "terrorism" is being avoided in discussion for fear of reviving the earlier Arab suspicions.

To underline the point, the measure's sponsors plan to present it as a new item before the Assembly, and not include it in the general agenda item that embraces all the previous discussions of terrorism-related issues.

"Terrorism" as a topic has been on the agenda of the General Assembly since 1972; for the next two years no action was taken—"owing to lack of time," as official United Nations documents put it. Last year, the sum total of General Assembly action on the matter was to assign it to this year's agenda for consideration.

In its present draft, the proposed convention would elaborate rules against the taking of hostages for any purpose—political or financial or to obtain the release of prisoners. It specifies the procedures

Editors of 4 Newspapers Ex Their Decisions to Print D

By FRANK J. PRIAL

Editors of four major newspapers agreed yesterday that they had had no choice but to submit to demands that they print statements by the Croatian nationalists who hijacked a New York-to-Chicago jetliner on Friday night.

The papers—The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Chicago Tribune and The Los Angeles Times—printed all or part of the texts supplied by the terrorists in their Saturday and Sunday editions. In each instance, the editors complied when they learned that the lives of 92 hostages might be at stake.

"If there was a journalistic policy, it would be not to do it," said A. M. Rosenthal, managing editor of The New York Times, "but there can't be a policy to cover this kind of thing in every single case."

"I don't think there is a rule they could teach at editor's school," said Benjamin C. Bradlee, executive editor of The Washington Post. "You never run into exactly the same thing."

Surrendered to Authorities

The terrorists, all of whom surrendered to French authorities at Charles de Gaulle Airport outside Paris on Sunday, had demanded that the papers publish two statements: their demands for a free Croatia and a long commentary on the cause of Croatian nationalism.

The Croatians demanded that their statements be published in part on page one and the balance of each story in the first sections of the selected newspapers. The instructions, along with the statements to be published, were left in a locker in the Grand Central subway station. Also in the locker was the bomb that went off at a firing range later when policemen attempted to dismantle it, killing one officer and injuring three others.

"We had no problem making our decision," said William F. Thomas, editor of The Los Angeles Times. "Anybody is fair game for someone who wants to kill people."

"What keeps getting ignored here," Mr.

Thomas went on, "is the policeman, with other dition, made what they a legitimate news story.

Confronted with that again, Mr. Thomas said same thing. "There is it," he said, "I'd react it."

Move Favored by the U.S.

West German diplomats here have been discussing their proposal with a wide number of other representatives and report a broad degree of support. The United States is clearly in favor of the effort, though it may keep its support relatively quiet if the judgment is made that American sponsorship could weaken the measure in the eyes of some third-world delegations.

reported by the owner of his apartment building to work for a Bronx company.

Brooklyn District Attorney Mario Merola, in whose county Officer Murray died, said his investigation was continuing in cooperation with all other agencies. Mr. Merola disclosed that there would be a discussion of prosecution problems at 2:15 P.M. today in the office of United States Attorney David G. Trager in Brooklyn. The meeting will be attended also by United States Attorney Robert B. Fiske from Manhattan and Mr. Morgenthau.

Hijacker's Apartment Searched

The Manhattan murder complaint had been preceded by a search of the apartment of the alleged hijack leader, Zvonko Basic, 28, at 303 West 76th Street. The application for a search warrant said that Mr. Basic, who is unemployed, told another person in Brooklyn a month ago that he "was in possession of bombs and other weaponry."

During the Federal arraignment in Brooklyn an assistant United States attorney, Thomas R. Pattison, told Magistrate A. Simon Chreïn that "a loose-knit group is involved" in the hijacking case. He said that "the extent of their funds is not known but quite an amount was needed for this crime alone."

Five one-way fares on the hijacked New York-to-Chicago Trans World Airlines flight would have cost $80 apiece—a total of $400. The hijacking operation also included printing thousands of handbills—1,500 dropped over Manhattan and the others over Montreal, Chicago, London and Paris in response to the hijacker demands for publicizing the Croatian campaign.

The air piracy charge carries a penalty, on conviction, of 20 years to life imprisonment. If a death is involved, the death penalty could be sought.

The murder complaint by District Attorney Morgenthau's office charged homicide in the second degree, which carries a penalty, on conviction, of 25 years to life. The initial search warrant had suggested a possible first-degree murder charge—a charge involving the death of a police officer and punishable by death in the electric chair.

The complaint, signed by Detective Neil G. McInnis, said "the defendants, acting together, acting under circumstances evincing a depraved indifference to human life, recklessly engaged in conduct which created a grave risk of death to another person and did thereby cause the death of Police Officer Brian Murray."

Defendants Identified in Court

In addition to Mr. Basic, described as having been a militant Croatian nationalist, and Mr. Vlasic, the defendants were identified in Federal Court yesterday as follows:

Julianne Basic, 27, Mr. Basic's American-born wife, who four or five weeks ago left her job as a teacher of English to the foreign-born at the SCS Business and Technical Institute, 1472 Broadway, Petar Matanic, 31, of 340 Saw Mill River Road, Yonkers, unemployed, who came to the United States from Yugoslavia in 1969 and was naturalized in Federal Court in Brooklyn only last Aug. 10. At that time he listed his residence as 27-24 21st Street, Astoria, Queens. The Federal Bureau of Investigation had initially spelled his name as "Matovic."

Frane Pesut, 25, of 261 Walker Street, Fairview, N. J., a machinist, who was reported by the owner of his apartment building to work for a Bronx company.

Brooklyn District Attorney Mario Merola, in whose county Officer Murray died, said his investigation was continuing in cooperation with all other agencies. Mr. Merola disclosed that there would be a discussion of prosecution problems at 2:15 P.M. today in the office of United States Attorney David G. Trager in Brooklyn. The meeting will be attended also by United States Attorney Robert B. Fiske from Manhattan and Mr. Morgenthau.

Court Assigns Defense Counsel

In the Brooklyn court proceeding, Mr. Basic told Magistrate Chreïn he wanted to represent himself, but the magistrate assigned Mark A. Landsman, a Brooklyn lawyer, to accompany him for the arraignment. In addition to ordering $1 million bail, Mr. Chreïn set another hearing for Sept. 23.

The Manhattan search warrant for Mr. Basic's apartment was signed by Supreme Court Justice Burton B. Roberts. An inventory given yesterday to Justice Robert M. Raft listed among a score of items seized an electrical switch, rolls of bell wire and electrical tape, a knife, screwdrivers, a plier with insulated handles and boxes with leaflets, hooks and papers.

Associates Describe Defendants

At the school where Mrs. Basic had started teaching nearly two years ago—formerly named the School for Computer Studies—Steven Sunshine, director of the English program, said she was "a great teacher" who maintained rapport with pupils. Mr. Sunshine said she had reported a distaste for New York smog and dirt and a hope to return to her native Oregon.

In Stamford, Ivan Capin, 33, who has been Mr. Vlasic's roommate for six years, said that the five defendants had met in New York several times a week but that his roommate had never discussed any hijacking to him.

He said that Mr. Vlasic played soccer Tuesdays and Thursdays at Randall's Island and that the group got together after the games. Mr. Capin added that Mr. Vlasic was formerly an electrician in New York City and had come to the United States in 1969 after being expelled from a Yugoslav university.

Waldheim Condemns Hijacking

The United Nations Secretary-General, Kurt Waldheim, yesterday condemned the weekend hijacking and said "it shows again how important it is to take international action against this kind of threat to international life."

The United Nations General Assembly has on its agenda for this fall a bid for discussion of international terrorism. Such discussion was first proposed by Mr. Waldheim in 1972 after the massacre of Israeli athletes at the Olympic Games in Munich. The Assembly has repeatedly postponed the discussion, but West Germany is pressing for an international convention against the taking of hostages by terrorists.

In Washington, the State Department yesterday rejected a protest by Yugoslavia over the United States' handling of the hijacking case. A department spokesman, Frederick Brown, said there was no cause for complaint. He noted that the hijackers were being arraigned for air piracy.

Cosmopolitan is hailing Rona Jaffe's brilliant and terrifying new novel as—"A page-turner all the way."

"It's as if four girls from the days of The Best of Everything had reappeared as grown women, with adult passions, problems, and compromises. New York, the glittery city that was once so prized a catch has turned into a cruising barracuda, waiting for the chance to strike. Under its baleful gaze, they work and thrive, weep in secret, give parties, make love, and get ripped off. You can no more resist finding out what happens to them next than you could shut your ears to a recklessly intimate conversation at the next table."

Tennis Clothes: Sensual

Geoffrey Beene, tennis dresses, from top: halter, Grecian-draped and strapless.

By BERNADINE MORRIS

A strapless dress for tennis? Sounds pretty risky. Not so, says Geoffrey Beene, its perpetrator. Mr. Beene has had vast experience designing strapless dresses for sunning or for dancing, and he virtually guarantees that this one will stay up, despite the vigor of the wearer's backhand or even her serve.

There were those sexist at the opening of his new tennis collection for Coberknit at the Four Seasons yesterday morning who hoped Mr. Beene was wrong.

"It would make watching women's tennis more interesting," said one gray-flanneled man, fresh from a weekend at Forest Hills. "You could always hope it would fall down."

A serious designer, Mr. Beene has no intention of attracting interest in his sports clothes in so blatant a manner.

A Sexy Collection

Nevertheless, he describes the collection, which will be coming in to the stores in December, as sensual, evocative.

The reason, he explains, is a new fabric, combining silk, cotton and a dash of polyester, that falls, drapes and blouses softly.

"It moves exactly the way the body moves," he explains. "You could even wear some of the things out in the evening."

He means the supple tank-like tops that are pulled over gathered skirts or shorts as well as tucked inside them. Some turn up with velour warm-up pants and jackets and would be comfortable around a roaring fire at a ski resort.

Some Look Grecian

Some of his tennis dresses look almost Grecian with their gathered waistlines and soft tucks at the neckline. But of course they're too short for dinner parties.

In addition to classic white, Mr. Beene introduces a pale lemon-ice shade and a sea green for the courts. They contribute to the sensual look. He also shows some men's clothes, which stick pretty close to classic T-shirts and shorts. One top, cut like an undershirt, is banded in a pale color to match the pants. That's about as far as he goes in the designs for men.

Prices run from around $25 to $30 for the tennis separates, $40 to $50 for the dresses. Sometimes the designer's name is part of the decoration, but always discreetly.

James Beard Discovers Life Without But

By JOYCE MAYNARD

On the covers of his cookbooks, or in the photographs that accompany his articles on food, James Beard is usually pictured—bald pate gleaming and belly jutting out roundly under his apron—holding platters that spill over with rich-looking delicacies, or raising a wine glass to his lips, or surveying a well-laid table as the benevolent monarch of a particularly fertile territory, might oversee his kingdom.

If a chef's girth were the measure of a chef's worth, James Beard, with his apple cheeks and sausage fingers and multiple chins would always have been the uncontested ruler of the kitchen and the grooming board.

But last July, at the age of 75, James Beard developed severe cardiac problems and phlebitis. So salt shakers and fats are banished from the kingdom now, and the rivers of thick cream sauce where fish filets once swam have all been stopped. Gone are the days of deep-fat frying and almond paste. James Beard has been put on a diet.

Not Exactly Svelte

At 260 pounds, James Beard is still far from svelte. But considerably shrunken, and less rosy-cheeked than his midsummer, 310-pound self, he no longer looks like a cookbook-cover model. A tall, pleasant-faced man wearing blue denim pants and a denim smock-style shirt, he sat in the fern-filled sunroom of his Greenwich Village townhouse, overlooking a garden where ivy and impatiens surround a life-size sculpture of a pig, and talked about a life devoted to good cooking and good eating.

"There's no sense getting into a suit about it," he said, speaking of the zero-sodium, low-fat regime. "What must be done must be done."

"Many people suffer on a diet because they view it as a punitive thing," he added, folding his hands over his stomach and speaking with determined cheer. "I have decided to view it as a challenge. Now I almost enjoy it."

"I've learned a great deal from this diet, about flavor," he reflected. "When you can't use salt, you detect subtleties you hadn't noticed before in the food. You're forced to be creative. You dream up new ways of doing things."

"Last night, for example, I wanted to have a chop. But there was the question 'How do I cook it?' I wracked my brain. Then—ah!—I arrived at my plan. I put the chop in a bed of tarragon surrounded by shallots and a very small amount of white wine. I covered my chop and put it in the oven."

When James Beard talks about food, it is as if he's telling a story. He gestures lovingly with his hands to demonstrate the tarragon bed, the tucking in of the chop, the splashing of the wine. He pauses for dramatic effect—leaving his listener in suspense, as if the future of the veal chop in the oven lay in some doubt. But of course no chop in the hands of James Beard need be the object of too much concern. And sure enough—

"Twenty-five minutes later, my chop was done," he said. "The tarragon had steamed through beautifully. The meal was delicious."

Still, there was some wistfulness in James Beard's voice, when he reminisced about roast pork. "Ah, butter," he sighed, gazing out into the garden. "I have always been the butter boy, and I do miss the excitement, and the wonderful aroma of a fine butter. But one adjusts. The salt-free margarine one can buy now is really quite tolerable."

This is a major change of tune for a man whose gustatory memoirs, "Delights and Prejudices," chronicle a childhood filled with hashed brown potatoes and butter cookies and Sunday teas in which the muffins and crumpets were "dripping with butter" and able to absorb it all "in shocking amounts."

James Beard was raised in Portland Ore, in a household of fine cooks. His earliest "gastronomic adventure" occurred when, not yet walking, he crawled into the family vegetable bin and consumed an entire raw onion, skin and all.

He began cooking for himself at the age of 5, though his first career ambition was to be an actor. But even in his poor days, as an actor in New York during the 1920's, he ate well. "It all depends on your agility in it and on how many times you've vited out," he said. "I'd fall back then, and wore my cap nearly every night."

When he was about 30, James Beard started a business, a friend, called Hors d'Oeuvres, which was a great success those days, most people with little limp pieces of toast, of cream cheese on the top of said Mr. Beard. "We eat very quickly."

During World War II, on rationing, James Beard ran clubs for merchant marine overseas. In France he fed servicemen, once again with ease.

"I think most people see food in a positive manner, get love their prejudices, certain things," he said. "In cases, they've never even food they think they hate, simply going on what they cooked. The truth is—and with some trepidation—cooking is not always the it's supposed to be."

Horror With Last

The most common mis take in preparing food, Mr. Beard said, is overcooking. "The horror ple will commit with a lam shaking his head."

Return of the Natives: What Did the Renters Break?

By DEE WEDEMEYER
BRIDGEHAMPTON, L. I. — When John and Carol Müller returned to their house at the end of the summer season, they went immediately into the library and said a prayer for, among other blessings, having their house returned to them in good order.

Not everyone who rents his home for the summer offers such a formal expression of gratitude. But as leases expire this month there are more than a few sighs of relief as the owners participate in a ritual that seems almost as old as the Hamptons.

As natives return—from trips elsewhere, from living in smaller houses, or on a boat, as the Müllers did, or in a chicken coop, as one man did—a common query in supermarkets and post offices is, "How did you find your house?"

In September, particularly the weekend after Labor Day, a major topic of conversation in some circles is own grudge. Rent deposits are much depleted and lawns are sometimes shouted about because of such calamities as a tenant planting corn on new sod.

Tenants Are Remembered
Mrs. Müller, who works in the local library, and her husband, an insurance man and a Fuller Brush dealer, have been renting their six-bedroom, early 19th-century farmhouse for 10 years, most recently, they said, for about $6,000. They have had many good tenants and little more to complain about than dirt. They remember each tenant for something, usually for what they left behind or did to the house.

A man they refer to as "the executive" had five telephone extensions installed and left an entire switchboard in the basement, where it remains.

Mrs. Müller said that this past summer's tenants, two couples, arranged dishes so illogically in the cabinet that they are now referred to as "the dish-movers."

The one word used repeatedly by landlords and real estate agents to describe the experience of moving back is "traumatic," which Dr. Samuel V. Dunkell, a psychiatrist who is the owner of a four-bedroom house on Clearwater Beach in Springs, believes has merit.

Observations Upon Returning
"If you have had a bad experience it is traumatic," he said. "You have a double loss—the loss of the house and the injury. Actually the house becomes a little personalized. You have the feeling you have been jilted by the house. It belongs to someone else."

Dr. Dunkell and his wife, Ruth, an artist, have rented their house each summer for the last three years, this summer for $6,000. They returned confidently to their house this past weekend, noting as they drove up that the grass was neatly cut and that the tenant, who also rented two years ago, left logs for them.

"Perfect. Perfect," exclaimed Mrs. Dunkell upon entering what appeared to be a spotless house. Opening the kitchen cabinets she discovered glasses and plates in regimental order.

"Here's the acid test," she said, opening the oven, which looked almost new. Dr. Dunkell immediately put on a recording of a Puccini opera to test the stereo, which he said was a cause of a dispute last year. It worked and before long the Dunkells were unpacking the two closets reserved for the landlord's clothes, linens, liquor and food.

Some landlords said that tenants become a factor in their lives in subtle ways. The Rev. William J. Chase, the coordinating chaplain at Roosevelt Hospital, rented his two-bedroom house in East Hampton for seven years, the last four to a lawyer he knew 30 years ago in graduate school at Harvard. Once a year the tenant invites him to lunch at the University Club and they discuss the house.

"Shyly," said Mr. Chase. "He's not one to make a commitment, nor does he make demands. I'm sort of poking around to see what he wants. It usually is I who think things up and he expresses either pleasure or apathy. The last thing I mentioned was more gravel in the driveway."

Some veteran landlords have developed entire theories on tenant behavior.

"They never replace refrigerator bulbs and they eat light bulbs," said Jack Rogers, a California-based investment banker who rents his East Hampton house with pool for as much as $9,000.

"That is a no-no," he said, opening a full refrigerator in his house, vacated by this past summer's tenants, who he said were close to flawless.

"But it is kind of fun to find out what kind of people they are by seeing what they left," said Mr. Rogers. "These are great cheese people. Almost all tenants are low-cal." There have been cases of abuse of houses, and lawsuits over rentals have continued even after a house has been sold. But many real estate agents and landlords say that more than 90 percent of the rentals go smoothly, with only routine damage.

Some problems stem from personal conflicts in which the real estate agent becomes the arbiter.

According to one East Hampton real estate agent, the owner of a house designed by a famous architect visited her house the first week of the tenant's occupancy. She discovered the tenant had moved her portrait to the basement and covered a prized piece of sculpture with a sheet. Relations deteriorated fast.

Allan M. Schneider, a Bridgehampton real estate broker, believes the disputes are caused by what he calls "dispossession paranoia."

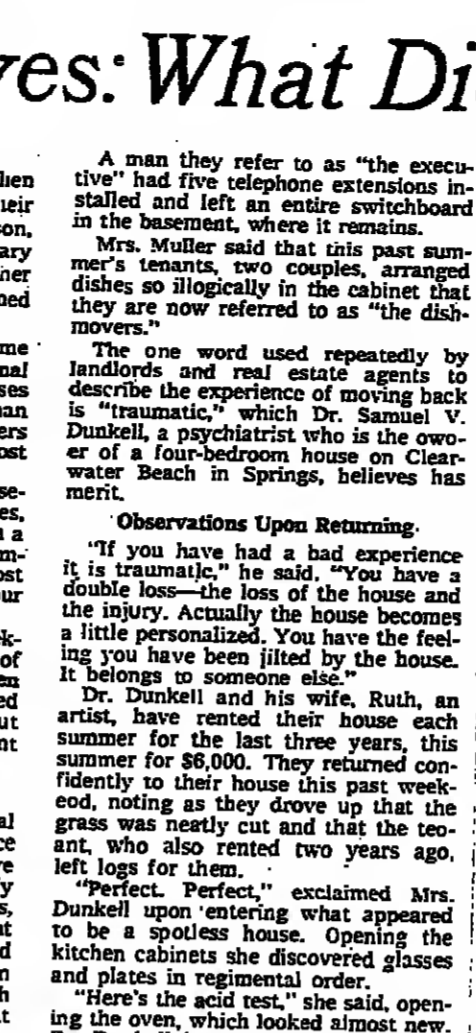

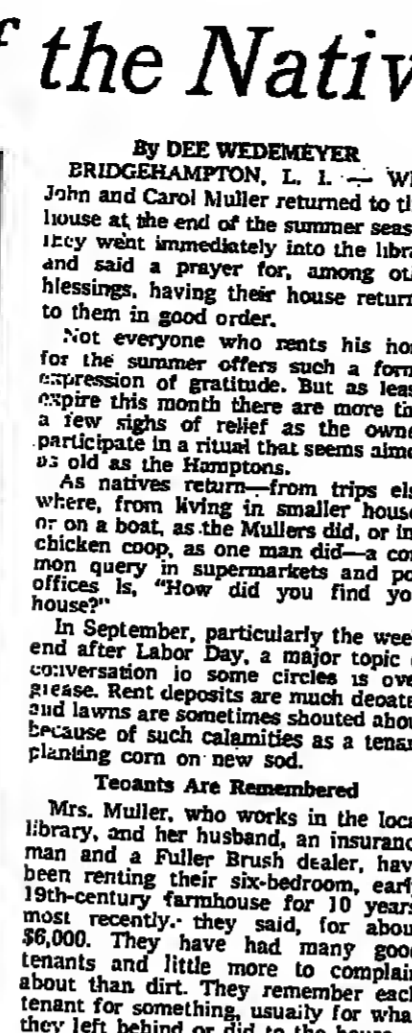

"The most attractive people will rent to the most attractive people and the minute they become landlord-tenants, it's like the law of the jungle," he said. It's obligatory. The landlord is unfair and the renter is ruining the house."

There are numerous instances of tenants writing thank-you notes, leaving a bottle of wine or sending a present, almost as if they had been houseguests.

Mrs. Gerard C. Smith, wife of the Washington lawyer who is a former chief of the United States delegation at the strategic arms limitation talks, said that in years past they had a tenant who broke chairs and one who tore up antique prayer rugs to line a staircase. But this year they returned, discovered the pictures rehanging furniture rearranged, about 20 plants and two television sets left behind and a thank-you note.

"It was much better than I had had it," she said. "It is sort of a joyful reunion."

A Hurricane in God's Eye

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMAN-HAUPT

A WIND TO SHAKE THE WORLD. The Story of the 1938 Hurricane. By Everett S. Allen. 369 pages. Illustrated. Little, Brown, $10.

The great hurricane that hit the northeast corner of the United States on Wednesday, Sept. 21, 1938, was one of the worst natural disasters in American history. It is estimated to have taken 680 lives and cost $400 million in property damage, compared with parallel figures of 430 and $350 million for the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906, and 200 and $200 million for the Chicago fire of 1871. (Also: some 26,000 automobiles were smashed; 275 million trees were downed; and more than 6,000 boats were lost or damaged.)

But how does one spend more than 300 pages writing about a hurricane, which is basically a great deal of wind, water, and destruction? That is what worried me as I began to read Everett S. Allen's "A Wind to Shake the World: The Story of the 1938 Hurricane." How much is there really to say except that God acted and people were forced to suffer?

Story of a Storm

Well, Mr. Allen has proved in his account that there is more to write about a storm than one would think. He is a newspaperman and a historian—chief editorial writer for The New Bedford Standard-Times, and the author of, among other books, "Children of the Light," a solid history of the New Bedford whaling industry. Through tireless legwork and relentless interviewing he has come up with almost as many angles as there are in a game of pool.

He has detailed the storm's effects in every locale it hit, from New York City, where the damage was comparatively mild and only a single person died, on up through Providence, R. I., the worst-hit population center, where huge waves rolled out of Narragansett Bay to inundate the city's low-lying business district, to the North Shore of Massachusetts, where entire summer colonies were wiped out. He has gathered countless reports of personal loss and salvation, each more hair-raising than the last—stories of people "forced up to their attics by the flood, there to be saved when their houses broke up and provided them with makeshift rafts; of children, old people, and animals swept away by raging waters, only to show up on dry ground miles away and hours later, miraculously alive... or gruesomely dead.

He has caught the awesomeness of it all in a hundred arresting details—the winds that snapped off the cups of anemometers just as they were registering 100 miles per hour or more; the barometric readings of 28 and below that transfixed observers just as they could least afford to pause and consider; the waves 60 feet in height and more, capped by 10 more feet of foam (a green wall filling the horizon, many observers called it); the eerie silence of it all, because the wind carried off all sound before anyone could hear it.

He has gathered together a thousand curiosities—how it was the heavers reinforcing their dams in Palisades Interstate Park that probably saved three arterial highways in upstate New York from serious flooding; how golfers playing at the outset of the storm whacked tee shots that rose straight up in the air; how the only house that carried hurricane insurance in the town of Mattapoiset, Mass., was left untouched, not so much as a pane of glass broken, while uninsured houses on either side were blown to bits; how in the ruins of St. Andrews Church on the Dune in Southampton, L. I., was found the inscription "Thou rulest the raging of the sea; Thou stillest the waves thereof when they arise."

A Singular Accomplishment

Indeed, again and again when I thought Mr. Allen's narrative had spent itself and finally succumbed to the essential monotony of the hurricane, it recaptured my attention with yet another vignette of redeeming interest. Of course I'd be a liar if I pretended that attrition doesn't eventually set in, that the unvarying intensity of the storm and the story doesn't, at last begin to dull one's senses, and that one's exhaustion at the end isn't as much weariness with the text as it is empathetic exhaustion.

Still, for all that, "A Wind to Shake the World" remains a singular accomplishment. No one saw the hurricane of 1938 in its entirety. A curious, and awful, feature of the storm was the sense of isolation that each locale in its path experienced; this was because, as Mr. Allen points out, the more each community had to report about the severity of the disaster, the less likely that it would have the means to communicate it. Now, at last, Mr. Allen has shown us what it must have looked like to God's eye.

104 KILLED AS A TYPHOON FLOODS AREAS OF JAPAN

TOKYO, Sept. 13 (UPI)—A typhoon with 100 mile-per-hour winds brought torrential rains to southwest Japan today, leaving nearly 325,000 people homeless.

The police said 104 persons were known to be dead and 57 others were missing in the storm, which has left nearly five feet of rain over wide areas of Japan since last Wednesday.

At least 290 persons have been injured, 2,350 homes have been destroyed or severely damaged and more than 338,600 homes have been flooded. The police said nearly 325,000 persons were forced to evacuate their homes.

The casualties were the heaviest since 1966, when a typhoon killed 318 persons.

MANILA, Sept. 13 (UPI)—A plane carrying the director of the United States Agency for International Development in the Philippines and seven other persons vanished in stormy weather today while attempting to land in Manila.

National Park Fund Raised by Congress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (UPI)—The Senate approved and sent to the White House today a bill that would triple Federal funds to acquire land for national parks and recreation areas.

The measure, adopted by voice vote, would raise the spending ceiling from $300 million a year to $600 million in the fiscal year 1978, $750 million the following year, then $900 million annually through 1988.

The matching funds provided to states are financed by revenues from Federal leasing of mineral and offshore oil and gas sites.

The bill "allows President Ford to honor his Yellowstone Park pledge of just two weeks ago to rehabilitate and improve recreational facilities," said Senator Henry M. Jackson, Democrat of Washington, chairman of the Senate Interior Committee.

The Senator said that Mr. Ford's new $1.5 billion request for parks and recreation had already been authorized.

$39 Million Complex Dedicated In Newark for Essex College

NEWARK, Sept. 13 (AP)—A crowd of nearly 2,000 people gathered to dedicate the $39.6 million Essex County College complex in downtown Newark yesterday. Planning of the six-level structure, which is intended to serve between 10,000 and 15,000 students, began 10 years ago. Representative Peter Rodino, Democrat of New Jersey, who attended the ceremonies, called the school "a beacon of learning, a lasting monument of human achievement."

During the ceremonies for the two-year college, a time capsule, which is to be opened in 50 years, was sealed in the building. Speakers at the dedication placed historic papers and other articles into the capsule.

"This college is the result of dreams and aspirations of a county determined to meet a community-felt need," said

Becky Schergens of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the keynote speaker.

The complex is the first phase in the planned construction for the college. The second phase will include a gymnasium and a fine arts division.

Gromyko Leads Soviet Delegation, To Sign Condolence Book for Mao

MOSCOW, Sept. 13 (UPI)—Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko led a four-member Soviet delegation to the Chinese Embassy today to sign a book of condolences on the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Western diplomats said that the level of the delegation was "appropriate," but not high enough to be considered a signal for possible rapprochement from the Soviet Government to the Chinese.

Relations between the two Communist nations have been strained for nearly two decades and the Kremlin's response to Mao's death last week has been restrained.

History on the Hudson

Settlement of the action brought by the State Department of Environmental Conservation against the General Electric Company is a promising advance in an extremely murky area. Whether it is a landmark agreement, as some environmentalists say it is, or a tentative and partial step forward, as others see it, there is no question that what has happened is good and may well turn out to be historic.

Expensive Patronage

A recent report from Albany by the Governor's Board of Public Disclosure has focused on large numbers of part-time state jobs that pay $30,000 a year or more. One of the report's surprising aspects is that the state's executive branch appears just to have found out what has long been common knowledge. But the report, though belated, does contain much useful information.

The Arab Boycott

The Arab boycott against Israel raises difficult political, economic, legal and moral issues for the United States. The boycott is repugnant. It violates American principles and laws when it requires American companies, as a condition for doing business with Arab countries, to discriminate against American citizens because of their religion. It unfairly imposes secondary boycotts against American companies that hire Jewish employees or directors, or trade with Israel.

if granted to an agency administrator, might be employed arbitrarily, especially in dealing with such complex questions as whether a firm did or did not participate in a secondary or tertiary boycott. Unfortunately, the Ribicoff amendment has now been embedded in the tax bill adopted by the House-Senate conference committee, and the President may have no choice but to accept it or risk killing the tax bill and endangering the economic recovery. Over the coming months, however, Congress and the President should develop a more effective and legally sound attack on the boycott.

Medicaid: 'Time to Demolish the System'

To the Editor:
Recent articles indicating widespread abuse and cheating in the federally supported health-assistance program fail to expose the greatest Medicaid fraud: the program itself.

Our teaching hospitals are now community-oriented and community-responsive. Our medical schools have now recognized their role in medical-care delivery in the regions they serve. To perpetuate Medicaid, with even more bureaucracy to stop the cheats and scandals will only perpetuate the greater fraud. It is time to demolish the system and rediscover the greatest strength in our medical-care system for the poor, the teaching hospital.

Toward a New Party

To the Editor:
As the Republican Party ever further to the right, new major party is gaining. Not the fringe radicals but those moderates who now party America on the horizon.

considering seriously what we been unthinkable until ago. Some of Reagan's supporters now talking of forming a party. If the November election expected, Reagan will have a of his own. What the need then is not a new party but a new second party. Con almost took the nomination a semi-conservative incumbent it could be Reagan, or conservative, all the way. To destruction, that is. A feat in 1980 would be the of the Republican Party.

To Fund a Library

To the Editor:
The desperate financial problems faced by New York City's public libraries will only be compounded if Adele Hoffman's "Library Cards at a Price" letter (Aug. 31) is not clarified.

Adele Hoffman's conclusion that "the public library is mainly a private enterprise" is undoubtedly, and understandably, a result of the fund-raising efforts of this private segment of the New York Public Library operation. But the "private" label does not apply to the library systems which provide this essential informational resource in communities throughout the five boroughs.

Arms for Iran

To the Editor:
Senator Humphrey and others have taken up the cudgels against U.S. arms sales to Iran. These advocates have little regard for our nation's best interests in areas of defense, balance of payments and domestic employment.

rate there is no earthly reason to shut off viable markets for arms export. The domestic repercussion would be greater unemployment—or proposals for bigger Federal handouts à la the Humphrey-Hawkins bill.

Flawed Analogy

To the Editor:
Historical analogies are ambiguous, but facts ought to. For Theodore H. Pyle's (letter Sept. 5), it was not Madame de Pompadour edly said to Louis XV, "At déluge!" Louis XIV did "something pertinent to Mr. Pyle's argument: 'I have loved war.' There is no evidence at cats that the Soviet Union will be in a position to United States militarily by mitting suicide. As for Pyle should recall that experienced an internal Soviet foreign invasion, in 1799, of the causes of that France's absurd involvements adventures, in which taken priorities in which penditures precluded necessary reforms.

The Right to Write and to Read

By Piri Thomas

As a writer, I have always fought for the right to write, for writing is a time-honored means of communication. Lack of communication, the refusal of some to understand, or outright refusal to learn about other human beings is based on fear. Fear is what keeps people apart. The seven members of the Island Trees School Board, Levittown, L.I., have voted to remove from the shelves of the district's junior high school and high school libraries nine books: "The Best Short Stories by Negro Writers," edited by a most-honored brother, Langston Hughes; "A Hero Ain't Nothin' But a Sandwich," by Alice Childress; "A Reader for Writers," by Jerome W. Archer; "Slaughterhouse Five," by Kurt Vonnegut Jr.; "The Fixer," by Bernard Malamud; "Go Ask Alice," whose author is anonymous; "The Naked Ape," by Desmond Morris; "Soul on Ice," by Eldridge Cleaver; and my own autobiographical, "Down These Mean Streets." "Laughing Boy," by Oliver La Farge, was placed back on the shelves while "Black Boy," by Richard Wright, was placed on a restricted list. How dare a few have the arrogance and presumption to decide what is suitable to be read and written!

History has taught us that in any suppression of human rights and dignity the first to be negated are the writers and poets. We should all know about the burning of the books during the dark days of the birth of Nazism in Germany. Book-banning is to my point of view becoming a dangerous threat to our freedoms in this land of the free and home of the brave. "Down These Mean Streets" was published in 1967. Ever since, there have been attempts to suppress it in Salinas, Calif., Teaneck, N.J.; Darien, Conn.; District 25, Queens, in addition to the latest effort, in Long Island. I have personally appeared, where possible, in some of the places where the book has been banned, not to defend its having been written but to assert its right to be read. In Darien, 2,000 schoolchildren mostly blond and blue-eyed, came to the high school auditorium to learn about a world that had been kept from them: Puerto Rican life in East Harlem. The ignorance of these young students about the realities of life outside their hoodlums was appalling. But their sincerity in wanting to learn caused me to spend over eight hours talking with them and their parents. In District 25, in College Park, Queens, in 1971 "Down These Mean Streets" was removed from the library shelves of the local schools over the strong protest of teachers and librarians and despite a valiant court battle by the New York Civil Liberties Union. It was banned, its critics say, because of obscenity. (It was reinstated in 1976.)

In the course of the community dialogue over the banning, a youngster spoke up: If Piri Thomas's book is as dirty as you who are banning it say it is, please go down to the boys' and girls' bathrooms here in this school and you'll really see something dirty written on the walls. I have always had a special fondness for, and empathy with, books and libraries. As I grew up, I lived, breathed and ran between the raindrops that were not water but drops of acid known as bigotry, hatred, and rejection. My one island of refuge in El Barrio was the public library on 110th Street between Lexington and Third Avenues. I gorged myself on books, borrowing two books as allowed and slipping three or four out from under my jacket and replacing them with three or four more soon to be read. Reading helped me realize that there was a world out there far vaster than the narrow confines of the Barrio. I learned that there were people who didn't care about color being a measure of superiority or inferiority. What mattered was the dignity of one's heart and the honor of one's word.

"Down These Mean Streets" was not written to titillate but to bring forth a clarity about my growing up in El Barrio in the 1930's and 1940's. The reason it continues to be controversial is that it shows a truth that is still happening today. If all these things I have written about do not exist, then I would be the first to take that lie down from the book shelves. But since the horrors of poverty, racism, drugs, the brutality of our prison system, the inhumanity toward children of all colors are still running rampant, let the truth written by those who lived it be read by those who didn't.

Thank creativity that, among others, there are organizations such as the Council on Interracial Books, the Puerto Rican Heritage Bookstore and the New York Civil Liberties Union, who fight for the right to read and the writer's right to write.

Piri Thomas's latest book is "Seven Long Times," an autobiography.

No Tears for the Giants

By Russell Baker

With the death of Mao Tse-tung the age of giants is closed at last. To mourn it would take a heart of stone, for it has been a barbarian's passage through oceans of blood and the charnel it washed on the shore makes Attila seem in retrospect as fetching as Peck's Bad Boy.

The giants who led it, or perhaps only made the trip first-cabrio, were flamboyant egocentrics whose passion for power fulfilled their age's hunger for new societies organized on the principle of industrial efficiency. This carried most of them toward centralized government constructed around political godheads with mythic or divine characteristics being attributed to the leader, whether he was called Der Fuhrer, Il Duce, the Generalissimo, the Chairman, the Caudillo or the President.

The characteristic political creation of the age of giants was dictatorship, and the characteristic political philosophy which still survives it in such vestigial artifacts as the C.I.A. and K.G.B., was that the end justifies the means. Not surprisingly, the citizenry for whom the giants labored became an inhuman abstraction—the masses or the people. Persons who made a to-do about their individuality became nuisances, eccentrics or menaces. The attitude varied from giant to giant, but on balance it was not a good time to be at odds with the will of the people, to be a person. The age gave us no peeps' republics.

An exception should be made for Winston Churchill, the one giant of the age who was, in fact, not of the age at all but a creature of Edwardian England who was still able to sentimentalize war and visualize a future in which the masses would not insist on pressing their power too rudely. Britain rejected him as an antique as soon as the Nazis surrendered.

Time magazine once hailed Churchill as the mao of the century. The accolade now seems as amusing as calling World War I the war to end wars. In the age of giants, Churchill was not even a very big giant.

From Lenin, who opened the age in 1917, to Mao, whose death closes it three generations later, there were giant giants, middle-sized giants, mini-giants, midget giants and false giants. The classic specimen of the last category was Chiang Kai-shek, who was inflated so alarmingly by Roosevelt and Churchill that it took Americans a generation to perceive that the castle housed only a mouse.

Francisco Franco was, to a degree, the similar creation of Hitler and Mussolini. De Gaulle sought the gift of inflation from Roosevelt and Churchill, was rejected, went away angry and came back years later to earn the seven-league boots for himself by restoring a France at the edge of a breakdown.

Hitler and Stalin, the purest specimens of the age's giant breed, were almost certainly political geniuses, which leaves little more to be said about politics in the 20th century. Lunacy harnessed to industrialism in the case of mass uplift. Dreams of perfecting humanity with the bullet in the back of the head and the gas oven. 'Nasty stuff, but infectious to sanity. Twenty years later Americans were destroying Vietnam to save it.

The age of giants, of course, has actually been over for a long time now, and we are slipping into the age of caretakers. The giants were great biographies and good copy; the caretakers are mostly a yawn. Witness Ford and Carter trying to persuade us that they are up to something vital, Witness Brezhnev, the committee chairman in Moscow. Nama quickly the Prime Ministers of Italy, Britain, Japan and Israel. Who is the President of France?

There is scarcely a biography in the bunch. Carter and Ford between them are hardly interesting enough to sustain a magazine article. And isn't it splendid? With oo giants strutting around shaking the earth, something vaguely resembling peace has become palpable. Vietnam may have been the last gasp of the age of giants in America. A case can be argued that it was Kennedy's, Johnson's and Nixon's insistence on trying to preserve giant-hood in the Presidency that accounted for the Asian fiasco, that they were men reluctant to accept the death of the age of giants, or too slow to perceive that it was over and that giants were no longer possible.

There is a glimpse of sunshine in this conjecture. If the giants, from Lenin to Mao, were not really giants but only expressions of a historic global impulse toward cataclysmic change, then it may be that the rise of the caretakers reflects the arrival of a new epoch in which we want consolidation and stability and, yes, societies that will give us the opportunity to use such gains as the blood-letting oozed us to search for our lost individualism.

Scientists and Arms

By Bernard T. Feld and Victor F. Weisskopf

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—The continuing accumulation of nuclear and other modern weapons is posing an ever-growing threat to mankind, while the arms race goes on without effective limitation. Many people believe that the scientists are responsible for weapons of destruction, and that they could, and should, stop the armaments race by refusing to work in weapons development.

Scientific discoveries are made by a handful of individuals engaged in the enterprise of understanding nature. By the time such discoveries are ready to be exploited they are so well understood that the tools derived from them can be applied by a vast army of scientists, engineers and technicians whose ethics, mores and motivations are no different from those of the bulk of the population.

What happens to such applications is determined by a complex interplay of politics, economics and sociology and certainly not by the decisions of the few scientists originally responsible for the new discovery or by the scientific community.

Intercontinental ballistic missiles involve the same technology as rockets used to study the upper atmosphere. The technology of multiple warheads and of maneuverable re-entry vehicles is the same as that which permits landing and takeoff of aircraft in bad weather, manned landings on the moon and the exploration of the planets. The same lasers that make possible "smart bombs" are being used to perform delicate eye surgery; they may eventually result in cheap fusion power. With few exceptions, the applications to weaponry are not evident when scientific discoveries are made.

Even some military applications of science can be helpful to curb the armaments race. Reconnaissance (spy) satellites and remote seismic detectors are technological developments that may yet permit the elimination of intercontinental missiles and the cessation of underground nuclear-weapons testing. If our political leaders can muster the courage to negotiate the necessary international arrangements.

Actually, scientists have been working to stop the arms race for over 30 years. Their record in this regard, as compared to that of their colleagues in the political and social sciences, or the politicians, is nothing to be ashamed of, although they generally share the frustrations of other men of good will over the lack of success. Scientists tried in vain to alter the decision to drop the atomic bombs on Japan, immediately after World War

If they devised an imaginative plan for placing the peaceful development of nuclear energy under international control, a plan that is now being revived by Western governments in a last-ditch attempt to prevent the imminent, worldwide proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Scientists called attention to the dangers of atmospheric testing of nuclear weapons and were largely instrumental in achieving the nuclear test-ban treaty of 1963. They goaded our Government into the talks on limiting strategic arms and are primarily responsible for the only true measure of arms limitation that has resulted to date: the ban on antiballistic-missile systems.

Biologists and chemists led the campaign against biological weapons; as a result, our Government has finally ratified the Geneva Protocol of 1925 (prohibiting the use of lethal gases and biological weapons in warfare) and the treaty banning the development and stockpiling of biological weapons. Chemists and biologists throughout the world are now working and agitating to extend this ban to chemical weapons as well.

Scientists' organizations have been in the forefront of attempts to educate the public and influence governments on the dangers of modern armaments and the need for disarmament: the Federation of American Scientists and its counterparts in other nations; Leo Szilard's Council for a Livable World; the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists; the worldwide Pugwash Movement; and numerous committees in and out of government.

Nevertheless, there is no question that we have so far failed to control the arms race. What is needed is more effective political action arising from a more general recognition that the roots of the arms race—now consuming so much of needed world resources and threatening us all with disaster—are social, economic and political. Rather than seeking to assuage our consciences by blaming science and scientists for the ills of society, we need to devote our attention to the political processes that must be brought into play if we are to eradicate these ills.

Bernard T. Feld and Victor F. Weisskopf are professors of physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Geologists Fascinated and Puzzled by Shape of Mars

By WALTER SULLIVAN
The expeditions to Mars by Viking 1 and 2 have aroused worldwide interest in the possibility of finding some form of life on that planet.
But while the search for life by the geologists has been the center of attention, geologists have seen Mars revealed clearly for the first time as a globe of fascinating and puzzling diversity.
Photographs from the two Viking orbiters and the two landers have shown Mars as a planet that, like Earth, has been shaped by great forces. But, paradoxically, those forces have produced very different results from those that have occurred on Earth.

Of special interest to scientists seeking to understand what forces have shaped the Earth, creating ocean basins, mountain ranges, earthquakes and mineral deposits, is the evidence that Mars, too, has been shaped by inner forces.
The two most prominent features are a volcano, Olympus Mons, so huge its base would reach from New York to Montreal, and a canyon that would stretch from New York to Salt Lake City. The volcano rises on the edge of a plateau dominated by a chain of three other volcanoes, each larger than any on Earth.

Dr. Guest and the other geologists have seen in Mars two distinct "provinces" like those characteristic of Earth's moon. One, primarily in the north, is heavily cratered, loftier and presumably very old. The other, to the south, is smoother, lower and therefore is assumed to be younger.
Because the surface of Mars has been raised or lowered in such monumental fashion, geologists hope to find there regarding similar changes on Earth. A major puzzle, for example, why the western United States was so roughly one mile in relatively recent times, geologically speaking.

Viking photographs show more clearly than before the geology of Mars. Though much smaller than Earth, Mars has a volcano, Olympus Mons (1), larger than any on Earth. The Martian Grand Canyon (2), would stretch from New York to Utah. Though arid now, Mars once had water, as indicated by ancient river beds (3) and sediment deposits (4). Some of the planet's missing water may be frozen in the polar regions (5). Geologists conclude that Mars seems to be divided into two provinces, marked by the broken line. To the south, the planet is heavily cratered, and to the north, relatively smooth.

Dial-a-Phone System Has Southern Roots

ATLANTA, Sept. 10 — It happens to almost everyone sooner or later. It's late, the electric clock has stopped, you forget to wind your Bulova and your child's Mickey Mouse watch fell down the garbage disposal a week ago.
So you call the Time of Day Service, ME 7-1212. The person on the other end says, in that curious manner and with a voice that sounds like canned honey, "At the tone, daylight time will be: 'Twenty-five.' 'Eggsactly.'
Ever wonder who it is who says that, and why she talks that way?

careful blonde hair, "I never really thought about technique, but I really and truly think I'm sitting at a desk in a lobby and someone just asked what time it is."
The person who asks that question might be a bit confused. So when Mrs. Barbe Jackson, she does it in pieces. That is, all of the numbers — Mrs. "I'm sorry," and all the numbers — "one" through "twelve" for hours and "one" through "fifty-nine" for minutes — are done separately. They're all put together by computer. That's why there is that short pause between them: "Twelve, Thirty-five, And thirty seconds."
Mrs. Barbe (pronounced Bar-bee) — "I used to call my children 'Barbie Dolls' — must also record with two different inflections for each number. That's because it should sound different when she says "TWENTY-one," as opposed to "ONE twenty."
The numbers, phrases and some complete messages are on different revolving tapes. About $ 1 million people a day hear Mrs. Barbe's voice on them.

The basic system has not changed since it was invented in 1933 by John L. Franklin, who founded the company. Mr. Franklin started by making a soft drink called Tick Tock. He advertised it by selling clocks with the words "tick tock" on the face.
From there, he developed recorded telephone advertising messages, coupled with a service: telling the caller the correct time. The first system was in-

Ball of $1 million each was set at the arraignment of the five hijackers who seized a T.W.A. jet Friday and took it on a 30-hour trans-Atlantic journey before surrendering in Paris. The five were also confronted with a murder charge filed by the Manhattan District Attorney's office. They were charged in the complaint with placing a bomb in the Grand Central subway station that killed a police officer during a deactivation attempt. [1:4.]
As the campaign ended, the five Democratic Senate hopefuls wound up debating nuances and images rather than issues. In the Republican primary, Senator James L. In return for a $1 million campaign contribution, a Nixon Administration official offered the President's help in arranging an aircraft sale to Japan, a former head of a Grumman Corporation subsidiary told a Senate subcommittee. The former Grumman official said he subsequently arranged meetings between other company officials and Richard V. Allen, a Nixon assistant, but he did not know if any contributions were made. Mr. Allen denied ever asking for the contribution and Grumman denied that it had made any contribution. [1:5.]
The first company to admit it received questionable payments was disclosed in documents released by the S.E.C. Warnaco Inc., which filed the documents, said that it had discovered an ocean carrier had paid about $400,000 to one of its subsidiaries and "one or more" employees. [5:3-4.]
The "Sunshine Act," a bill designed to open the meetings and records of many Federal agencies, was signed by President Ford. The bill's sponsor, Senator Lawton M. Chiles Jr., said the law would discourage "cozy" relationships between regulatory agencies and the industries they regulate. [5:3-6.]
Stock prices fell toward the end of the session in slow trading. The Dow Jones Industrial average closed down 5.07 points at 983.28, [5:2-3.] Bond prices were little changed in light trading activity. [5:4-5.] Cocoa futures reached record highs on the New York Cocoa Exchange. [6:3-6.]

Year Begins in New York Numerous Signs of Cutbacks

By LEONARD BUDER

School year got under way yesterday with many ups-and-downs, some optimism and uncertainty, but to large classes and services caused by the system.

Irving Anker, after visiting several schools and receiving reports on the going relatively well. "Most classes were organized and well prepared," he said. "The principals, staff members and parents are to be complimented on the high level of preparation and cooperation."

Mr. Anker told reporters who accompanied him on the visit. "This gives the lie to those who predicted chaos in the schools."

For some high school students, however, the opening day was perhaps more confused than usual. A computer programming error "assigned" several hundred Brooklyn and State Island students to the wrong schools.

Because of the mistake, some students who are supposed to attend Erasmus Hall High School in Flatbush were sent notices over the weekend to report to the new Boys and Girls High School in Bedford-Stuyvesant. And a group assigned to Curtis High School on Staten Island was mistakenly directed to Martin Luther King Jr. High School in Manhattan.

Layoffs Avoided

Frank C. Arricale 2d, the chief, said that he managed to avoid some of the layoffs by creating a reserve, which provides vacancies in the districts filled by substitutes used to replace teachers.

He said, however, that the 3,700 teachers who are off in recess weeks, which has 47,000 students since 1975-76, will face the new layoffs. Teachers with greater seniority are being let go—many from extended contracts.

At 84, at 32 West 92d St., he said, the day began with the idea — with parents' term the parents' temporary success, to all day. Yesterday they lay boycott in protest.

One parent or child said Anette Friedrich, but we want our teachers.

The principal, said that several classes without here would be an adult school has also lost, dozen paraprofessional aides. Fewer than 500 pupils attended.

Education, visited two Manhattan schools — P.S. 34, at East 11th Street and Avenue D, and P.S. 23, at 70 Mulberry Street in Chinatown.

As they had expected, they found evidence of cutbacks in staffs and services, including large classes. Many classes had pupil registers in the high 30's and a few had 40 and 41 pupils. But both schools seemed well-prepared for opening day, and the youngsters, who brought notebooks and pencils, were full of enthusiasm.

"The principals, staff members and parents are to be complimented on the high level of preparation and cooperation," Mr. Anker told reporters who accompanied him on the visit. "This gives the lie to those who predicted chaos in the schools."

Model School in Bronx Forced To Drop Many of Its Programs

By EDWARD B. FISKE

Public School 152 in the Bronx is supposed to be a model of what a big-city elementary school can be.

Born six years ago out of community pressure for a new style of public education, the school occupies a new brick building with a tree-filled courtyard just off the Bruckner Expressway above Humes Point.

A group of young, energetic teachers, hand-picked by Ted Sumner, the principal, put together a program based on "humanistic" principles of education and individualized instruction.

"The school works on the philosophy that all children are good at something," said Susan Thompson, president of the Parent-Teachers Association.

Immediately Popular

Two years ago, P.S. 152 was designated a "magnet" school, which meant that parents throughout District 3 could apply to send their children there. More than 175 did so, including dozens from much more prosperous neighborhoods.

Yesterday, however, as P.S. 152 opened for the new school year, the community's dream of a better education for its children was in trouble.

In the science laboratory, which used to have live animals in cages, chairs and desks were piled in the middle of the room and microscopes were locked up for use—it was hoped—in some future year.

Claudette Rosh, one of six paraprofessionals left from a staff that once numbered 31, pattered around the spacious library trying to do the work of the nonexistent librarian in the midst of her other chores. "We've got no one to order materials or see in it that kids can take books home over weekends," said Mr. Sumner.

Loss of Teachers Cited

Mr. Sumner, who once went to England to study the famous British "infant schools" and came back convinced that some educators here were doing just as well, the frustration lay not so much in the budget cuts imposed by the Board of Education as in the way they were managed.

Under procedures agreed to by the board and the United Federation of Teachers "excessed" teachers whose jobs are eliminated can replace, or "bump," others with less seniority. They, in turn, can bump still others with even less experience.

"In the last two years 19 of my teachers have been replaced with new ones who aren't familiar with our system," Mr. Sumner said. "It's not like they were fired, though; they're teaching elsewhere—and often in a place where they can't use what they've learned here. It's crazy. It's sheer stupidity."

Marc Sharoff, a fifth-grade teacher who is chapter chairman of the teacher's union at the school and is an architect of its innovative program, agreed.

"The rules on excessing teachers were not made up with these large numbers in mind," he said.

The problems facing the school were not lost on the students, even on the first day.

"I feel bad about what's happening," said Naemah Humphrey, who is 10 years old. "Last year we had music twice a week. Now we can't have it. We'll just have to stay in the class all day."

Bus Change Scored

Phyllis Humphrey, her mother, said that, like many of her neighbors, she was troubled by the board's decision to subsidize the transportation of students who live within a mile of their school.

"These are little kids," she said. "It's too far for them to walk in bad weather. They'll be soaked. Education is supposed to be the most important thing, but what good is it if they can't get here?"

She said that she was charmed at the cutbacks. "Whatever, little extras kids have, they sweep under the rug," she complained. "My son was looking forward to playing the guitar. Now they have $5,000 worth of instruments locked in the closets."

She sighed and pointed to Zakiya, who is 14 months old and was clinging to her mother's shoulder. "What's it going to be like for her?"

Man Saved From Leap Off Brooklyn Bridge

Despondent over his mother's death last week and distraught over a breakup with his girlfriend, Louis Meldanado an 18-year-old youth who had become transfixed by the view of the Brooklyn Bridge from his home at 182 South Street, climbed up one of the spool's cables yesterday afternoon and threatened to jump to the East River 250 feet below. "He really wanted help, of course," said Officer Richard Powers (dark glasses at left) who led an Emergency Service rescue team that gave it to him. When they were just three feet away Mr. Meldanado suddenly grabbed the hand rail and dangled beside the cable. As he hung there Officer Donald Porter, at left, a father of five children who had kept up a steady conversation with the young man, grabbed one of his wrists. Officer Powers seized the other and Mr. Meldanado was pulled to safety. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital for psychiatric observation.

A STRIKE IS STARTED BY INMATES IN BRONX

Most of 500 at House of Detention Take Part in Peaceful Protest on Variety of Grievances

By TOM GOLDSTEIN

Inmates at the Bronx House of Detention began a peaceful strike yesterday, protesting visiting restrictions, what they termed excessive bail and the lack of speedy trials and other phases of the criminal justice system.

Most of the 500 inmates at the institution remained out of their cells, refusing to eat, work, attend recreation periods or receive visitors. Some declined to go to scheduled court appearances.

Inmate leaders spent much of the day conferring among themselves, negotiating with Correction Department officials and meeting with newsmen.

More than a quartet of the inmates have been awaiting the disposition of their cases for more than six months. The jail, in the southwest section of the borough overlooking the Major Deegan Expressway and is within shouting distance of Yankee Stadium.

'Been Here Too Long'

"They've been here too long," said Peter Schaefer, the warden. "I don't blame them. What can we do? Maybe this will help."

Jail officials said the protest began as a result of inmate dissatisfaction over the pace, in which contact-visiting was being introduced into the facility.

Last May, Federal Judge Morris E. Lasker ordered that such visits—where an inmate can touch and talk to a visitor without a barrier preventing physical contact—be introduced by tomorrow. But last week the inmates were told the visits would be delayed for three weeks because of construction problems.

"The demands then escalated," said Benjamin J. Malcolm, Commissioner of the city's Department of Correction. "I don't understand all the demands."

Meeting Arranged in Chapel

One request by the striking inmates was that they be allowed to meet with specific newsmen. Mr. Malcolm quickly arranged for a half-hour meeting among inmate leaders and reporters in the jail's chapel.

"You've got to understand we're human beings," said Glenard Jackson, who said he has spent 11 months in the jail awaiting trial on an armed robbery count. He said his bail had been set at $1,500. "I'm angry," said the 26-year-old inmate, "and I want people to understand."

Another inmate, Johnny Flowers, said the protest would not end until the inmates were guaranteed that charges would be made in the criminal justice system that would lead to faster and fairer trials.

Mr. Flowers said the protest was unrelated to a series of peaceful protests in three state prisons in the last month.

Five years ago, during the prison revolt at Attica, Mr. Flowers was a prisoner at the upstate facility.

"Thank God, this won't be like that," Mr. Flowers said yesterday. "This I am positive will remain a peaceful demonstration."

Metropolitan Briefs

Police Day Shortened, But Year Is Lengthened

The Board of Collective Bargaining affirmed the award of an impasse panel calling for a shorter work day for police officers and also dismissed an appeal of the award by the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association. Police Department officials have indicated that new work schedules, incorporating an eight-and-a-quarter-hour day rather than the present eight-and-one-half-hour day, will go into effect early next month. As a result, police officers will have to work 10 additional days over the year.

Douglas D. Weaving, president of the P.B.A., called the panel's award and the board's affirmation of it "arbitrary, capricious and totally irrational." He said the P.B.A. would go to court in an attempt to have the ruling set aside.

Jobless Rate Rises

Unemployment in the 10-county New York metropolitan area increased in July by two-tenths of a percentage point to 9.8 percent, or 460,300 workers in a labor force of 4,720,100, the United States Labor Department reported. The increase was the second monthly rise since the year's low of 9.1 percent in May. July's higher unemployment reflected an increase from 10.1 to 10.3 percent in New York City and Westchester, Rockland, and Putnam Counties, and an increase from 7.8 to 8 percent in Nassau and Suffolk Counties.

Kallinger Trial Begins

Judge Thomas F. Dalton of New Jersey Superior Court in Hackensack ordered that charges against Joseph Kallinger in a sex and robbery crime in Dumont, N.J., be severed from those in the murder of a nurse in Leonia, N.J. Judge Dalton agreed with Paul J. Giblin, Paul Giblin, lawyer for Joseph Kallinger, talking to newsmen outside court in Hackensack yesterday.

L. I. Sludge Line Approved

The Nassau County Board of Supervisors has approved plans to construct a $858,000 pipeline that will carry sewage sludge from the Bay Park sewage treatment plant on Long Island to offshore barges for disposal at sea.

The 7,800-foot pipeline, which has a 16-inch diameter, would be used in conjunction with an already-built 10-inch pipeline of the same length to pump the sludge directly onto barges.

The existing pipeline formerly carried the sludge to two large storage tanks on Pearsall's Harsco, which exploded on June 2, killing one teen-age boy and injuring another.

It was decided not to replace the two tanks because of the estimated $2 million to $3 million cost. The cause of the blast has not been determined.

Workers Continuing to Bet on Instant Lottery

PERLMUTTER

The instant lottery tickets throughout the state yesterday were sold in a big way. Officials in charge of the game of chance, by sales to commuters back at Grand Central station and the Port Authority.

The regional director said that $2.75 million tickets were sold in New York City in the first three days of the sale last Wednesday. The sale has not yet been tabulated.

The sale was a bonanza for the state lottery. Tickets that were sold in the city so far have won a total of $1,000,000 and a chance to win $1,000 a week for life.

in a special drawing to be held later. To date, a total of 31 jackpot tickets have been purchased in the state.

Branch banks in many areas have run out of their supplies of tickets and many vendors showed up yesterday at borough lottery offices and elsewhere in the state to purchase new supplies.

Tickets for prizes of $2 and $5 can be cashed where they were purchased. But tickets for prizes of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000 have to be cashed at the lot and $5,000 have to be cashed at the lot and regional offices. In the city there are borough offices in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx. Mr. Nolan said yesterday that a cashing office would be established Thursday on Staten Island at the State Department of Motor Vehicles unit at 60 Bay Street, in the St. George section.

The state lottery office in Albany reported yesterday that there had been no new reports of ticket tampering by vendors. The tickets of a vendor in Buffalo were impounded last week when it was found that the seller had scratched tickets to reveal a code number that shows the ticket to be a $2 or $5 winner. An anonymous phone caller charged a vendor in New York City with the same violation, but a check by agents failed to turn up any proof.

According to John D. Quinn, director of the state lottery system, the agency has had a ticket-sales goal of $4.75 million a week in the state. A spokesman for Mr. Quinn said yesterday it now appeared that the goal would be surpassed.

Edwin Sherin, last represented in New York as the director of the revival of Tennessee Williams's "Sweet Bird of Youth," starring Irene Worth, has been engaged to direct "The Dream," a psychological thriller that will have its premiere in New York the week of Jan. 16. The new play, adapted by Leonard Spigelgass and Richard Lortz from the book of the same name by Lucy Freeman, makes use of psychoanalytical techniques to solve a murder. Mr. Sherin, best known as director of "The Great White Hope," also staged the American Shakespeare Festival productions of "King Lear" and "Major Barbara."

City Opera 'Cav' and 'Pag' Niska Is Santuzza and Patricia Craig Sings dda in Inventive Stagings by Corsaro mastered a strong cast. Nedda, for example, becomes very much the physical center of attraction. Every-ooe is drawn to her—Silvio, her young lover; Tonio, the deformed clown; a selflessly devoted dwarf (Mr. Corsaro's invention, but a telling one), and Canio, her husband, for whom she still feels gratitude and tenderness even though she can no longer love him.

The concept of the production is a brilliant one. And if Patricia Craig's Nedda did not generate all the sensual allure necessary to put it across, she made the dramatic points neatly and sang with abandon. Ermano Mauro used his burly tenor with sensitivity to create a poignantly believable Canio, while Pablo Elvir's robust Tonio, David Holloway's mellifluous Silvio and Melvin Lowery's conscientious Beppe all contributed positively to the performance.

Music: Jazz Trio

Ensemble at Hopper's Led by Barbara Carroll's Piano

Although Barbara Carroll is unquestionably the key figure in the trio she is leading through Sept. 25 at Hopper's, Avenue of the Americas at 11th Street, the group has more identity as a unit than is usually the case when a pianist simply provides accompaniment for Miss Carroll's piano, Jay Leonhardt on base and Ronnie Bedford on drums frequently add brief solo elements to the performance that become threads carrying equal weight and color with Miss Carroll's parts.

Miss Carroll, for her part, is playing exceptionally well and programming herself to show, in any single set, the variety of approaches of which she is capable. A charming original waltz with a particularly haunting slow section, "In Some Other World" may be followed by a rumbling, moody blues filled with inner conversations for all three members of the trio, an interlude of unaccompanied piano and then a swinging fugue in which Miss Carroll cleverly allows the fuguing to interfere with the galloping joy of her swing.

It is rare to hear a jazz pianist offer as rounded a program as Miss Carroll or one that combines polish and power as effectively and seemingly effortlessly as she does.

The Dance: Park Festival Ends

Six Works, Including Two Premieres, Are Offered — Flawed Realization of Ideas Is Noted

For its last program, the New York Dance Festival came up with an evening of inspired mediocrity Sunday night at Central Park's Delacorte Theater. Most of the inspiration was visible in the ideas behind the six works, including two premieres, that were on view, but it was the flawed realization of these ideas that accounted for the mediocrity.

Sara Rudner offered the first premiere, "Wendy's Solution," performed by herself, Dani Bank, Francesca Bartocini and Wendy Rogers. It was a sad example of how a sophisticated choreographer can look sophomoric. The piece began with the four women, wearing red shorts over white trousers, performing uniform movement phrases with leitmotifs of joggling, bopping, swiveling and turning. Progressively they broke up into pairs or trios, often picking up movement motifs from the soloist.

understatements and the horrors detailed in the accompanying tape—such as Billie Holiday's singing of "Strange Fruit."

"The Murder of George Kuter" is Cliff Kuter's passionate tribute to a cousin, killed by a sniper. Here, too, the form is reserved: The work for four men is a theater piece with a deliberately fragmented structure. At times the emotion loses its force when the formal values take over.

Paul Sanasardo's new work, "Andante Cantabile," to music by Georges Enesco, needs to be seen again. At first glance, this fine modern dancer's ballet duet for two classical dancers—Naomi Sorkin and Lawrence Rhodes—appears bereft of the depth it promised.

A welcome change of pace in the evening came from Rachel Lampert's sharply etched family portrait, "Issue." The image of a child torn by her parents' mutual rage and then her loneliness at being excluded from their momentary bliss was conveyed with humor and pathos by Miss Lampert, Alfredo Gonzales and Holly Harbinger. Jennifer Muller's "Speeds," is not the best example of her flinging exuberant style, but it was notable for the dancing of Angelina Wolf, Miss Muller and Matthew Diamond.

Quite different was Dyane Harvey's outstanding performance of "Roots," Elio Pomara's tribute to black women. Much of the solo's power lies in the contrast between the choreography's

GOING OUT

CITY OF OPPORTUNITY

Outlanders often accuse New Yorkers of being know-it-alls. It can't be helped. Living here has some drawbacks, but there is just so much going on that those who take advantage of the city have to be better informed. An example of this is the extraordinary "African Woman/African Art" exhibition that opens today at the African-American Institute.

Essentially, on display are 154 functional art objects—some seen in the United States for the first time—from 60 ethnic groups in 26 African countries. The objects—figures, dolls, masks, jewelry and furniture, for example—are related to African women's roles as child, mother, politician, soldier, consumer, homemaker and individual.

However, the display is exceptionally organized to show and tell what the objects mean to women in their various roles. The catalogue, also, rather than a mere set of illustrations and a listing, presents material that puts the objects in their context. There are also four statements and one poem on what five African women think about being an African woman today. A bibliography and guide to more literature and films on African women is also included.

Lee Castle and his Jimmy Dorsey orchestra will play some of their oldies but goodies.

Senior citizens' admission is $1.25, group of 10 or more, $1. Others, $2. Town Hall is at 113 West 43d Street, between Broadway and the Avenue of the Americas. Information: 582-4536.

KEYBOARDER

Doo Shirley is a renaissance pianist. He was taught by his mother and traieed in Russia. When he was 18 years old, one of his compositions was played by the London Philharmonic. He has played with the Boston Symphony, Milan's La Scala Opera orchestra and several American symphonies. He conceitros on contemporary American music—jazz.

He is not heard perhaps as often as he should be. But tonight and again tomorrow, at the Bottom Line, Mr. Shirley will perform, providing the audience with the technique and style that earned him praise from Igor Stravinsky and Sarah Vaughan and that led Duke Ellington, George Shearing and Nat King Cole to persuade Mr. Shirley to go into jazz.

He appears on a double bill which also features Jane Oliver, a vocalist. Show times are 8:30 and 11:30 P.M. Admission is $4.50. Seats are on a first-come, first-seated basis. Drinks run from 75 cents to $2.25. Tickets may be purchased at the Bottom Line from 12:00 to 1 A.M. Information: 228-7830 (recorded), 228-6300. The Bottom Line is at 15 West Fourth Street, at Mercer Street.

SOCIAL SECURITY SETS

Crawford, a Tiger Reliever, Starts and Beats Yanks, 3-1

By PARTON KEESE

This is the time of year that baseball teams bring up minor leaguers, take another look at their reserves and give relief pitchers starting opportunities. Out of first place by 2 1/2 games, the Detroit Tigers did just that last night against the Yankees and won, 3-1.

The minor leaguers didn't get a hit and the reserves made an error, but the starting relief pitcher came through with his first victory of the season after losing six games. His name: Jim Crawford, a 6-foot-3-inch left-hander, a product of Arizona State and Alaska.

Crawford should have had a shutout. But in the seventh inning, Wayne Scriven and Mark Wagner, the reserves' contribution to the second-hassle shortstop combination flubbed a potential double-play ball. Manager Ralph Houk of the Tigers got nervous and Crawford was taken out with a 3-0 lead.

"Yeah, I wanted to stay," said Crawford, who will be 26 years old at the end of the month. "But when you have a John Hiller in the bull pen, you can understand. That's what he gets paid for."

Hiller Gives Up Sacrifice Fly

Hiller allowed a sacrifice fly off Willie Randolph's bat for the unearned run and then preserved Crawford's sixth major league victory.

Crawford outdueled another left-hander, Ken Holtzman, who was matching his rival zero for zero until the sixth inning, when two consecutive pitches were hit out of Yankee Stadium by Detroit sluggers.

Rusty Staub, who also had a double and a single and was robbed of a four-for-four night by Randolph's diving stop in the first, belted one over the right-field wall, his 12th homer of the year.

Willie Horton, the designated hitter, hit Holtzman's next offering over the left-field wall, also his 12th. There was no mistaking Staub and Horton for reserves, however. Both have been around awhile.

Holtzman gave up the third Tiger run when he wild-pitched Scrivenner home from third in the seventh, and the Yankee pitcher was yanked by Manager Billy Martin in the next inning after a single and a double.

A Last Chance Fails

The Yankees had one more chance to get back in the game when Mickey Rivers led off with a hunt for his third straight single and Roy White doubled into the right-field corner. But Hiller bore down to get Thurman Munson on a pop-up, Lou Piniella on a strikeout and Chris Chambliss on a soft grounder.

Then the rush to Crawford's locker, where the modest pitcher was queried about his first triumph as if it had been a World Series game.

"Alaska's this about spending winters in Alaska?" someone asked him. "Do you spend your summers in Florida, too?"

"I went to high school in Palmer, Alaska, which is about 50 miles north of Anchorage," Crawford explained. "I played semipro there, too. A lot of guys did who are now in the big leagues. Chambliss was on my club. Tom Seaver was on another. There were three clubs in those days, around 1969."

Crawford admitted the people in Alaska probably had no idea he had just won his first game of the year. He won five with the Houston Astros in 1973 and 1975, but when somebody Elliott Maddox of the Yankees is forced out at second as Mark Wagner of Detroit throws to first too late to get Willie Randolph last night in the fifth inning at Yankee Stadium. The Tigers won the game, 3-1.

Seaver Tops Pirates, 5-0, Fans 12 in Fifth Shutout

By THOMAS ROGERS

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 13—Describing his performance by saying, "I couldn't throw any better than that," Tom Seaver tonight slowed the Pittsburgh Pirates' pursuit of the Philadelphia Phillies, allowing just five hits in a 5-0 victory for the Mets at Three Rivers Stadium.

A winner for the third straight time since he shook off a drought of eight weeks in which he could not win a game, Seaver struck out 12 Pirates and walked only one. In only one inning did Pittsburgh pose a serious threat.

The loss dropped the Pirates five games behind the Phillies with 20 games left for each club. Seaver quipped, "I've got to treat everyone equally." On Sept. 3, he blanked the Phils, 1-0, on four hits at Shea Stadium.

Kranepool Starts It

right-hander who came into the game with a four-game winning streak.

Ed Kranepool led off with a single to center and hustled to third on a double to left by John Stearns. After Roy Stager was intentionally walked, Bud Harrelson was home on the game's first run with a line single over second base.

With the bases still loaded, Seaver forced Stearns at the plate. But Bruce Boisclair kept the rally humming with a single to right that scored Harrelson. Seaver, though, was trapped between second and third base and ruo down for the second out. Boisclair took second on the play.

Felix Millan then virtually clinched the victory for the Mets with a two-run single to right. Dave Giusti replaced Demery and gave up a double to John Milner that brought home Millan with the fifth New York run.

Seaver, who tied the National League high for strikeouts by a pitcher this season, opened the game by fanning ORCHARD PARK, N.Y., Sept. 13—Coach Lou Saban sent O. J. Simpson into the game on the fourth offensive play for the Buffalo Bills tonight against the Miami Dolphins, and Simpson gained 7 yards in an off-tackle play, showing a quick start and a great cut.

Simpson's effort did not do much for the credibility of training camps, since he had had only one practice, and that a routine signal drill last night.

Nor did it do much for the fortunes of the Bills, who trailed, 27-14, after three quarters.

The Bills' superstar joined the team yesterday after holding out and demanding to be traded to the Los Angeles Rams. Saban said Simpson would be fined $200 for every practice he had missed during the 10 preseason weeks, and the sum comes about $9,000. "He's just the same as everyone else," said Saban, who had to be kidding.

A $2.5 Million Fact

It was estimated that Simpson's new agreement with the Bills, which covers three seasons, would bring him $2.5 million.

Roland Hooks, a second-year pro, and Darnell Powell, a rookie, shared the halfback position before Simpson went in. He had said earlier that he did not expect to play very much, but a huge crowd turned out at Rich Stadium to see him and the game, the first Monday night television production of the season for the National Football League. The crowd was estimated at 75,000.

Men, Horses and Speed

"It's like Joe Namath scrambling," Reggie Cornell was saying inside Barn 15 at Belmont Park. "Every time you have a horse who can run fast, you'll have injuries. Speed kills horses. Sure, it's cruel. You know in your heart that if you have a great horse, you could wind up with a lame horse."

It was a week or so after the Hambletonian, the race they call "the Kentucky Derby of Trotting," won by a horse named Steve Lobell in four adventurous one-mile heats spread over five hours. In the first heat, he lost a shoe and finished 14th. In the second, he equaled the world record and finished first. In the third, he was out on the ankle and finished fourth. And in the final, he ran down his two rivals and won.

151,000. Three hours later, he collapsed from exhaustion in his stall.

During that long, hot afternoon, two world records were matched and two were broken. Also broken was the left foreleg of Stanley Dancer's great trotter, Nevele Thunder, who had won 22 of his 36 races. A year earlier, the big winner in four tough heats was Bonefish, who suffered a hemorrhage a week later. As Reggie Cornell was saying, they were like Joe Namath scrambling—great horses, lame horses.

When the Hambletonian was over, Billy Haughton reflected on the agony and the ecstasy of the harness horses he drives, like Steve Lobell, and said: "They used to breed them for stamina. Now it's dash, dash." Three nights later at the new Meadowlands track in New Jersey, four pacers piled up, one was destroyed and Haughton was spilled from the sulky with a broken nose, two compressed vertebrae and several cuts.

Time Waits for No Horse

Speed. Men cover a mile in something under four minutes. Harness horses, pulling a 35-pound sulky with a man, do it in something under two minutes. Thoroughbreds, carrying a 110-pound jockey, in something over a minute and a half. Sometimes it takes years to notice the improvement. In 1923, Paavo Nurmi ran the mile in 4:10.4. A decade later, Jack Lovelock in 4:07.6. A decade later, Gunder Hagg in 4:01.4. A decade after that, Roger Bamister in 3:59.4, and now they're below 3:50 and flying.

The harness horses are doing it in one great leap against the clock this summer, whether it's the new streamlined sulky, souped-up tracks or better breeding. They've dashed the mile 1,153 times this year in less than two minutes, a 100 percent increase in a year, and broken 39 world records, besides.

"Speed," Reggie Cornell was saying not far from the grave of Ruffian, the fastest filly who ever lived—and died. "With the prices today, people who put their money into horses want to get it out. The tracks offer big purses, the states let them run all winter and people pay a million and a half for a Secretariat colt. Hell, they're going to run him.

"I know about speed. I had Silky Sullivan. He didn't start himself. He had a breathing problem; he poked along, but he finished big. He ran horribly in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and he shipped him to California. We raced him out there with Bill Shoemaker on him against a class speed horse, Alhambra. At the three-eighths pole, Silky was 75 lengths behind Alhambra. He must have made up 50 lengths in 4 1/2 lengths. He must have made up 50 lengths in 4 1/2 lengths. You can go back to the day when Johnny Longden was winning by 20 lengths on Count Fleet. The horse finally broke down, but Longden was the speed king. You'd ask Longden what he did and he'd say, "They can run as fast on the lead as in back. Horses are made to run."

California was, and is, speed country: Hollywood Park, the first "paved road" in racing. The hometown hero, Swaps, so fast they even built a statue of him outside the track. Santa Anita, with jet rollers to dry the track, and they would seal the surface by blowing it. And finally, Longden, who'd say: "Go to the front and improve your position."

Fast Horse on Slow Train

"I guess Swaps was the fastest horse I ever saw," Reggie Cornell said, jamming his hands into the pockets of a red windbreaker. "A lot of horses could run fast, but Swaps would keep going. In the match race with Nashua, he didn't have much chance. Nashua was up in Saratoga that summer, where it's nice and cool. Swaps was out in California, and they sent him to the race in Chicago by train through the desert. It took him three days. He had a foot infection, too. They say he lost three shoes in the race.

"He broke his leg later. So did Holst The Flag, who was winning all his races so easy and then broke down right here training for the Kentucky Derby. They put 23 screws in his pastern. Now you can't breed to him for less than $25,000. Remember Spanish Riddle? Billy Kilmer, the quarterback for the Washington Redskins, owns part of him. When the horse broke his foot, they wanted to destroy him, but Dr. Edward Keefer, a people doctor, made an artificial foot for him, and now he's down in Virginia on the farm. He wears out about three artificial feet a year, but he just had a $96,000 yearling at Saratoga this year.

"Secretariat's one of the few super horses that retired early," he said. "A lot of people who screw up a horse—the blacksmith, groom, exercise boy, trainer, owner. You try for the Triple Crown—or the Hambletonian in trotting—that's all pressure. You can't miss a day. If you don't have a big robust horse, you can't do it."

"What's the answer?" he wondered. "If you run your horse in all the big races, you're going to wear him down. You've got to space him out, maybe run longer but slower races as a 2-year-old. Honest Pleasure ran away with the Flamingo this year, and wasn't the same after that. Bold Forbes was a natural running machine, he won the Derby and Belmont, but I don't know if he'll come back now. Even Forego is beginning to show his age.

"Maybe it's like Harry Truman said: 'If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen.' But we run 'em too fast too early."

Look at it this way: If your morally pure little economy car has $3,000.00 worth of cozy optionals, why are you still drinking ordinary scotch?

Open Tennis Objectives: Increase Seating, Prizes

Encouraged by record crowds, a fat new television contract and an exciting final day, the United States Tennis Association will study further expansion of facilities and prize money for next year's United States Open championships.

"We've got several ideas in mind for next year," Stanley Malless, the U.S.T.A. president, said by phone yesterday from Indianapolis. "And all signs for the future are positive."

Receiving top priority according to Malless, will be upgrading the grandstand court to stadium status by doubling its seating capacity and adding lights for night programs. Reserved grandstand seating similar to that used at Wimbledon also may be instituted for next year, Malless said.

Charles Tucker, chairman of the tournament committee for the West Side Tennis Club, agreed that increasing the grandstand seating from 2,500 to 5,000 and adding more bleachers for prominent field courts would help accommodate larger crowds.

Total attendance for the 12 days at Forest Hills was 250,880, an increase of over 34,000 from 1975. Officials said attendance records were broken in 11 of the 12 afternoon sessions and six of the eight evening sessions.

Tucker said he also favored a major renovation for the main stadium as part of a long-term program to meet the demands of the tennis-minded public.

"We've got several architectural plans for completing the bowl," Tucker said. "One is for adding seats in the open area at the west end. Another plan is for a three to four story building there that would have underground dressing rooms for the players, a press box at the top and a whole area of larger boxes that could be sold on a five-year basis to help pay off the cost."

Any major stadium renovation, Tucker felt, would require a long-term contract between the club and the U.S.T.A. Malless said the association hoped to renegotiate its contract with West Side, which has nine years left, to coincide with the three-year contract signed over the weekend between the U.S.T.A. and CBS Sports.

Although terms of the television contract were not announced, it is believed the U.S.T.A. will receive between $7 and $8 million from the network in the next three years, well above the $1 million paid during the preceding three years.

The U.S.T.A. offered a record in prize money of $418,000 this year, with $30,000 each going to Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert as singles champions.

The dramatic three-hour Connors victory over Bjorn Borg last Sunday received one of the highest Nielsen ratings ever for a tennis telecast in the New York area. Despite opposition from the Oakland-Pittsburgh pro football game, the tennis drew a 10.2 overnight rating with a 26 percent share of the audience to 10.2 and 28 for the football game. The rating for tennis telecasts is seldom higher than 5; last year's final day drew an 8.9 national rating.

Connors played the whole tournament with little court hinks and was aware of how crowds could shatter his concentration.

"The New York crowd is a difficult crowd for me to play in front of," he said, perhaps thinking of his friend, Ilie Nastase. "These people are used to hockey, basketball, football. They come to see blood. I didn't want to give them any of mine."

Issue and Debate: Women's Demands for Equality in Men's Are Threatening $11 Million Tennis T

By NEIL AMDUR

Jimmy Connors collected $30,000 for beating Bjorn Borg in a 3-hour-10-minute men's singles final at the United States Open tennis championships on Sunday.

The preceding day Chris Evert received $30,000 for defeating Evonne Gooleg, 6-3, 6-0, in 52 minutes for the women's title.

Equal pay for equal play has become only one of the issues that threaten to disrupt the $11 million professional tennis tour.

Members of the Women's Tennis Association have voted to boycott next year's Wimbledon championships and hold their own $300,000 tournament in the United States unless they receive parity with the men. The present Wimbledon prize-money ratio favors the men by 80-20.

But the Association of Tennis Professionals, with 203 male players from 40 countries, says future United States Open money breakdowns should reflect where the action is, and the action, it insists, is clearly with the men.

The battle lines are defined, but the question remains: Should women players receive the same prize money as men at major international tournaments?

Unlike most professional sports, in which separate tours remain in effect for men and women throughout a competitive year, the top men and women tennis players assemble for such world championships as Forest Hills, Wimbledon and the French and Italian opens.

The early years of open tennis provided no equality for women. At the first United States Open in 1968, for example, the men's first prize was $14,000, with $6,000 going to the women's winner.

In 1970, with little hope for improvement of the women's share, two players, Cecil Martinez and Estee Emanuel, surveyed several spectators Open fans on whether spectators would pay to see women play. The favorable results of the survey and the financial support of a company, Philip Morris, whose board chairman, Joseph Morris, whose son is a tennis fan and player, produced the first all-women pro tournaments that year.

The women's push for equality gained its strongest momentum in 1971 with the emergence of 16-year-old Chris Evert at the Open. The following summer the long-awaited first meeting between Miss Evert and Evonne Gooleg in the semifinals at Wimbledon upstaged the men's draw.

A men's boycott of Wimbledon in 1973 allowed Mrs. Billie Jean King and Miss Evert to bask in the final-round spotlight. With the financial backing of Ben, a decorator manufacturer, the women received parity with the men for the first time at the 1973 United States Open.

Few international tournaments, however, offer equal prize money. At Wimbledon this summer Miss Evert received $20,000, compared with $25,000 for Borg, the men's champion. The difference between the men's and women's first prize at the Italian open was $15,000.

"If you look at drawing power, which is what you're considering as a promoter, the women are as big as the men," says Jerry Diamond, executive director of the W.T.A.

Says Mrs. King: "Walking down the street, if you ask Joe Six Pack, he doesn't know any more than the top four players—men or women."

The W.T.A. also stresses that women's pro tennis has opened the doors to a new group of sports fans—women—who might not otherwise attend matches.

Mrs. King, Miss Evert and other women pro players argue that the men may have more depth in a comparison of each tour's top 64 players. "But they've also had more opportunities," says Mrs. King. "You're not going to see the kind of depth among the women for another five to 10 years. We haven't had the same kind of opportunities or programs."

Says Diamond: "You're not going to make women stars until you treat them as stars." He calls European promoters the worst offenders in short-changing the women.

The W.T.A. cites the record attendance on the Virginia Slims circuit last year and higher national television ratings than comparable men's events as examples of the women's drawing power. It also contends that the fragmentation of the $8 million men's circuit and the inability of the men's council to control its players and promoters, make the men's circuit less attractive than the unified women's.

Mrs. King and others maintain that the equal pay-equal work principle "is bed logic" and should have no bearing on prize money, since promoters have never requested the women longer matches. At a recent meeting, the players voted three-of-five-set matches, "just men," if that policy would equal prize money at Wimbledon.

"We're not fighting for more," said Betty Stove of the Netherlands, newly elected W.T.A. president. "We want equality."

The Opponents

"Equality" said Jimmy Connors of the United States Open. "The men play the women's final on 'day. Everybody knows who's going to be it."

Bob Briner, executive director A.T.P., believes that "when groups play together, the men, much more to a tournament."

"It's a question of market says Arthur Ashe, a top-ranked player in the last 10 years. According to the market value of the year's yond Misses Evert and Gooleg not as great as the men's.

Although he won the Open doubles title with Mrs. King's Billie Jean King, an Australian, he does not believe in equality.

"We spread tournaments all country every week and they crowd," he says. "The women have one tournament a week. Dent argues that the men's at Forest Hills "were the real tournament," a statement that drew a concurring nod from M during their news conference a mixed doubles final. Mrs. King ever, blamed the slow play face for the lack of excitement on matches.

"The equal money does dist. "The guys," Dent says. "I'd like to see a more prop amount go to the men. We des

The Outlook

In the aftermath of the United States Tennis Association review the equal prize-money motion, Stanley Malless, the president, said yesterday.

"It seems there are only that are outstanding," he said from Indianapolis in what he called a shift in association's future. "It doesn't make a difference."

Briner believes the market should decide. "The best way that is separate men's and women's events at Wimbledon and Forest Hills," he says. "Let the women separate time from the men, a week later. If the women can produce equal dollars, they des Briner and Diamond agree men's and women's association confer more than they do, a wide area of commonality of Briner says. Mixed events and consistent admin and player policies as potent of agreement.

Redmond, Red Wing Star, Retires, Citing Injuries

DETROIT, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League announced today that a star right winger, Mickey Redmond, had decided to end his playing career because of back injuries. In making the announcement, the club said Redmond's attorney would meet soon with Red Wing officials "to explore the possibility of Mickey continuing to serve the hockey club in some capacity."

Redmond, now 28 years old, joined the Red Wing during the 1970-71 season. He scored 42 goals in 1971-72, his first full season as a Red Wing, and went from there to chalk up a Detroit record, two consecutive 50-goal seasons. He scored 52 during 1972-73 and 51 the following season.

Pride of Carlisle Winner In First Goldsmith Trot

SPECIAL TO THE NEW YORK TIMES

RUTHERFORD, N. J., Sept. 13—Pride of Carlisle stood resolutely in the stretch tonight and won the first $30,000 division of the Goldsmith Maid trotting series at the Meadowlands.

Dream of Glory, the 4-5 favorite, finished fourth in the nine-horse field. Pride of Carlisle, owned by the William Sickoff Estates of Hollywood, Fla., was timed in 1:59 for the mile.

Duncan MacTavish drove the winner, who returned $25.60 for $2 to win for his backers in the estimated crowd of 13,000. Songbird finished second, three-quarters of a length back and a neck ahead of Savrin.

The victory for Pride of Carlisle was the 4-year-old gelding's sixth in 13 starts this season and increased his 1976 earnings to $54,383.

Simpson Enters The Game Early Against Dolphins

Giuseppe Nat Moore for 27 yards and to Howard Twilley for 18.

John Holland, the Bills' wide receiver, streaked underneath a pass Joe Ferguson had overthrown, intended for Paul Seymour, his tight end, and caught it to start a 55-yard touchdown play.

The Dolphins struck back with a beautiful 74-yard drive, Don Nottingham scoring from the 1. The Miami offense was a precise machine moving as one with perfect timing.

The Ferguson-Holland passing combination struck again for a 38-yard touchdown play to tie the score at 14-14. Ron Yessman kicked a 25-yard field goal 21 seconds before halftime to put the Dolphins ahead, 17-14.

Giants' Loss Doesn't Dim Future

By MICHAEL KATZ

"The same old Giants." "The season is over." Some Giant fans were quick to bury their team after the opening-game last-minute loss to the Redskins on Sunday.

But even as the still of the locker room in Washington gave way, at first to expressions of disappointment, they began talking of next Sunday.

Next Sunday, the Giants play the toughest part of their National Football League schedule—in order, the Los Angeles Rams, St. Louis Cardinals, Dallas Cowboys, Minnesota Vikings and Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Giants can't consider the Eagles, 24-7 losers to the Cowboys, a "breather," though. "With our schedule, we've got to win this one," said Jack Gregory.

"What you did last week and 25 cents will only get you a cup of coffee," said Coach Bill Arnsparger. "Even if you win."

Arnsparger and his staff spent yesterday watching films of the Redskins game. What they saw, he says, was a "very good football team" rally in the last minute and beat the Giants.

But if the Redskins were "very good," then how did Arnsparger "view" the Giants, who despite numerous mistakes and sloppy play, still led Washington until the last 45 seconds?

"Well, I think we're capable of playing good football," he said. Arnsparger was not concerned only with the Giants' inability to stop the Redskins' final 42-yard drive, capped by the 5-yard touchdown pass from Billy Kilmer to Mike Thomas.

"We were lacking in all areas through the game," he said. "We made some good plays, we made some bad ones."

Craig Morton, the quarterback who despite two long touchdown passes had a poor game with four interceptions, one overthrown pass (to Jimmy Robinson who was in the clear when Pat Fischer of the Redskins slipped), took the blame for what turned out to be the final margin, the third-quarter safety.

"It was just a dumb, stupid play on my part," said Morton, who was tackled in the end zone while trying to pass on a third-down-and-12 from the Giant 2 and who had time to throw away the ball before Ron McDole hit him.

Good Game for Defense Many of the Giants were quick to admit their mistakes after the game. It is a sign of maturity. And for the most part, they played well, especially on defense.

"This was the best game we have played since I've been here," said Jim Stenke, a fourth-year safety. "But it's over. It's looking for Philadelphia."

The Giants may have to shuffle their offensive line for Philadelphia. The line, which gave Morton much better protection than it did a year ago against Washington, suffered the loss of Al Simpson, the left guard who twisted a knee in the opening half. Simpson was listed as "doubtful" for the Eagle game by Arnsparger, who said he did not think the other injuries were serious.

But Karl Chandler, who moved from center to Simpson's position, has a bad foot (someone stepped on it in the opening quarter) and Arnsparger wasn't sure who would start where against the Eagles. He has Ron Mikalajczyk, acquired last week from Oakland, as a possibility at guard, or he can leave Chandler there and start Ralph Hill at center, where the former World Football League player was for most of the Redskins game.

Joe Danelo, the place-kicker, suffered a pulled groin muscle shortly after joining the Giants last week. ("Maybe we worked him too hard at first," said Arnsparger), but kept it quiet until the pregame warmup. Brad Ven Pelt substituted on kickoffs and did a fine job. Danelo made both extra-point attempts and kicked a 20-yard field goal. A 48-yard attempt was wide. Even with an injury, he showed a strong leg.

HEMPSTEAD, L.I., Sept. 13—As he has been in every practice since 1965, Joe Namath was the Jets' No. 1 quarterback today. As always, he was watched by an understudy.

But there was a difference. And as time goes by—a few games, half a season, maybe a year—it may take on more significance.

For the understudy, Richard Todd, had done something no one else had been privileged to do—namely, replace Namath to bring more dimension to the offense.

It happened twice during the 38-17 loss to the Browns yesterday, when the Jets were driving and were a few yards away from a score while trailing by 31-10 late in the third quarter.

Unsuccessful First Time Namath had been prepared for that. When Lou Holtz took over as coach last February, he said that Todd, the rookie, would probably go into the game in goal-line situations.

Because Namath's knees take away his option to run, he cannot bring an added dimension to the attack. And last year the Jets had repeated trouble scoring from inside the 15-yard line—when they were able to get that close.

Todd was unable to move the team to a score that time. He returned late in the game, after Namath had moved the Jets to the 8. Todd rolled out, saw his receivers covered and ran for the score.

In the final seconds Todd returned and hit four straight passes before he was intercepted, and the final Jets' drive was halted.

"We have talked about this," said Todd. "Joe understands it. He's not a selfish player. Some people may think that who don't know Joe."

Todd was happy with what he had accomplished in his few minutes of playing.

"I didn't miss a read," he said, meaning the Brown's defensive alignment. "I threw one bad one, the interception. But I didn't miss a read."

Today's practice allowed Todd to absorb information. But it didn't allow him to throw the ball as much as he would have liked.

"I want to go into a game and move the offense forward," he said. "But I understand that it's a bad situation to go into. I go in when there isn't much to be done. The main thing I get out of practice is mental preparation. Ninety percent of the time I'm watching."

Replacements for Denver Game It would be premature to make much of Todd's performance (four completed passes in five attempts and the 8-yard score), because the Browns, with the big lead, were giving Todd the medium-range pass.

Yet Todd does not appear afraid to replace Namath. He was not hesitant when he got in and he didn't seem to be confused, the way many rookie quarterbacks are.

There will be some replacements, perhaps of a more permanent nature, for the Denver game on Sunday.

Steve Davia has worked his way back to a starting role and will join Ed Marinaro at running back. The experienced Davis is bigger and stronger than the rookie, Louie Giannone.

Giannone may be used to return punts and kickoffs. The special teams performed well in limiting the Browns' punt and kickoffs returns, but not so well in returning kicks themselves.

There will also be a change in the defensive front four. The unit failed to put pressure on the Browns' quarterbacks, who completed 72 percent of their passes. There were no sacks by the Jets.

"The only one I'm set with is Billy Newsome," said Holtz. He will look at Lawrence Pillers, a rookie from Alcorn State, perhaps at right tackle. That would be Ed Gallagher's spot. The other line positions are held by Richard Neal at right end and Carl Barzilauskas, the massive left tackle.

On the offensive line, whose pass protection dismayed Holtz, there will be a new face in practice at right tackle—Al Krevia, the backup for Winston Hill, who will receive a long look this week.

Canada Routs Czech Six; Orr Tallies 2, Vachon Stars

By ROBIN HERMAN

Sept. 13—Scoring four in an opening period and a take-charge guard. Now we have one.

Deois Potvin had the next goal, taking the puck from Daryl Sittler. The line of Sittler, Larry and Bob Gaine excelled in forechecking. At the blue line, Potvin and Bobby Orr, alternating shifts, intimidated their foes with brilliant defensive work and some vicious elbows and high-sticking violations that were only rarely called by the American referee, Gordon Lee.

Orr scored his first goal of the tournament on a power play. Esposito set up the goal.

The Canadians' fourth goal was scored by Guy Lafleur after Steve Shutt had taken a shot that was body blocked by Oldrich Machac, a Czech defenseman. But the puck slid under him and Lafleur moved in alone on Dzurilla to score.

The change of goalies for the second period had not noticeable effect on the playing of the Czechoslovaks, who have a reputation for playing well only when they are ahead. Their timing on passes was off and they ignored the checking game that had so impressed the Canadians. Team Canada, meanwhile, retreated to more defensive pose after taking the 4-0 lead.

Referee in Trouble Early in the third period a puck shot by McDonald stuck Lee, the referee, opening a cut over his left eye that required about 10 stitches.

Ove Dahlberg, a Swedish referee, officiated the remainder of the contest. Dahlberg hadn't been on the ice three full minutes when the blade of his skate broke off the boot in a jamup along the boards and he too was escorted off the ice. Neither brief delay helped the Czechoslovaks regroup.

After Dahlberg returned with a new skate the only hard-working Czechs seemed to be Milan Chalupa, Jiri Bubla and Milan Kajkl, three defensemen. The Czechoslovaks forward lines continued to play sluggishly.

By this time the Canadian team was beginning to play sloppily but did so with impunity as Orr knocked in another power-play goal late in the game to make it 5-0. Sittler's last-second goal wrapped up the Canadians' scoring.

Rangers Sign McEwen

The Rangers signed Mike McEwen, a 20-year-old defenseman, to a multi-year contract yesterday. He was their third-round pick in the National Hockey League draft and will be among 45 players expected to report tomorrow to the team's training camp at Long Beach, L. I.

Introducing The Credit Account.

Once you have it, you'll understand credit better, and know how to use it right.

The Credit Account* is pure bank credit.

A phone call or visit to European-American can get you the best kind of credit there is. Pure bank credit.

We call it The Credit Account. It's a separate account. Separate from your checking account. Separate from all other accounts. It's straight credit, pure and simple. Easy to use. Easy to understand.

Just qualify and we'll make from $1,000 to $10,000 available to you.

Then, whenever you need money—for any reason you choose—you've got it.

The Credit Account is a lesson in using credit to your advantage.

The Credit Account helps you use credit right, because it's credit with built-in advantages.

Here are some of the ways to use credit as it ought to be used.

Use The Credit Account instead of loans. You'll pay lower interest than on almost any installment loan.

Use it to pay off other credit that costs you more in interest. Like many department store charge accounts, credit card accounts, and revolving credit accounts.

Use The Credit Account to organize and pay off all your credit through one inexpensive credit source. One source, so you can review your entire credit picture at a glance.

And remember this, too: unlike some other kinds of credit, The Credit Account costs you nothing until you use it. Not a cent.

Another advantage: privacy.

Once you have The Credit Account, why and when you need money becomes what it should be. Your business. Not ours.

You only have to apply for the Account once. After that, there are no interviews when you need money. No application forms to fill out. No trouble.

Call (212) 895-3404.

You can get The Credit Account by phone, too. Call us from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. any weekday.

Give us the information we need. We'll get back to you as soon as possible with the amount of credit we can put in your Credit Account.

Or if you like, stop in at the European-American branch that's best for you.

The Credit Account will help you use credit the way credit was meant to be used. It's smart, and it works.

Head of the Monsanto plant near Cardiff in Wales. He plans to tank car if drought continues, or drill for it around factory.

Drought in Wales Is Forcing Monsanto to Drill for Water

By PETER T. KILBORN
Special to The New York Times

Sept. 13—The Monsanto Co. is drilling for water east of Cardiff, Wales, to reduce its consumption of water around its plant. It also plans to tank cars to haul water if necessary. A score of other big plants in Wales are being ordered to try to reduce consumption by 50 percent after tomorrow, said a Monsanto spokesman. The company's operations there, "would be by shutting down five of our 20 plants and reducing our consumption in other plants." Such actions, he said, would provoke layoffs among the 850 Monsanto workers. So far, through the summer, Monsanto has cut its water consumption by 15 to 20 percent, Mr. Shearn said. It is devising ways to cut more, but big additional cuts would affect jobs. Last week, the British Government's new drought minister, Dennis Howell, promised that he would find ways to get water to thwart layoffs. But the Government is making no efforts to protect production that would be lost without sacrificing jobs. That is why Mr. Shearn is still drilling holes and lining up tank cars.

Rainfall in Wales Down Sharply
Wales, normally one of the wettest outposts of Europe, has recorded less than a third its usual quantity of rainfall this summer. Over the years, the region lured many big companies here—Ford, Parke-Davis, Johnson & Johnson, Alcan, Dow Chemical, Borg-Warner and Monsanto—without building enough new reservoirs to tide them over dry summers. Already in the southeast, consumers' water supplies have been drastically curtailed. Responsible public officials own

WARNACO DISCLOSES RECEIPT OF FUNDS FROM OCEAN CARRIER

Document Made Available by the S.E.C. Uncovered $400,000 of Payments to Subsidiaries

By ROBERT D. HERSHEY Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—Warnaco Inc. has made what is believed to be the first admission by a company that it was on the receiving end of questionable payments, according to a document made available by the Securities and Exchange Commission today. Warnaco said an investigation uncovered some $400,000 paid by an ocean carrier to one of its subsidiaries and "one or more" employees of that subsidiary. The transactions occurred in 1970-74. Although neither the S.E.C. nor Warnaco, a Connecticut-based apparel manufacturer, would say so, the payments were reliably said to have come from Sea-Land Service, a unit of R.J. Reynolds Industries, Reynolds. Reynolds last Friday the paying of some $19 million in possibly illegal rebates by Sea-Land. Warnaco also disclosed that the payments, which it said had been ordered halted, were being investigated by the Federal Maritime Commission. The maritime agency administers the Shipping Act of 1916, which bans rebates, among other things.

One Other Case

The only previous case involving the questionable receipt of money was that of Gamble-Skogmo Inc., a major Minneapolis-based merchandiser. In that instance, announced by the company last month, the money apparently went entirely to employees of a Gamble subsidiary. A domestic subsidiary of Warnaco, however, actually received the payments. The S.E.C. was said by a company spokesman to have learned independently of the Warnaco rebates and to have suggested that the company undertake an investigation, which is still under way. Since rebating by Sea-Land was of such magnitude—and it said Friday its payments had been forced on it by competitors—it appeared likely that many more rebating cases would come to light because of pressure by the S.E.C. and the Maritime Commission. In a related development, S.E.C. Chairman Roderick M. Hills, said at a news conference this morning that he hoped the Government over the next several months would begin to carry out specific counter measures, where necessary, against foreign companies engaged in "competitive bribery" to win business from American concerns. Mr. Hills said as he has previously, that the United States has immense leverage to pursue such a campaign. Among the remedies might be to protest such behavior either through secret diplomatic channels or in public.

Other Observations

Mr. Hills also made these observations on other subjects:
¶ There is "no doubt at all" the commission will authorize early next year pilot programs for trading in put options, Mr. Hills pointed to what he said were erroneous published accounts that the S.E.C. was growing reluctant to approve puts, declaring "How can you sell half a horse—they, puts and calls, go together."
¶ A merger of the New York and American stock exchanges could be a "very healthy" development, an "extraordinarily sound way to create competition for all stocks." He conceded, however, that such a combination might be poorly structured so as to become anticompetitive.
¶ The public probably has a misapprehension.

Glamour in Accounting

In Detroit, the Crescendo of Opening Night

DETROIT—This is the time every year when a tremendous amount of excitement and tension build up here in the nation's automotive capital. The crescendo becomes even stronger every third year when the deadline approaches for the conclusion of a new labor contract between the workers. And 1976, of course, is one of those years. The atmosphere at this city's headquarters of two of the industry's Big Three—the General Motors Corporation and the Chrysler Corporation—is now filled with a mixture of supreme optimism over the outlook for their business, unhappiness with the Government's timetable for emissions standards on new cars and apprehension over the outcome of contract discussions at the Ford Motor Company that are scheduled to reach a denouement at midnight tonight. Waiting Anxiously for the Critics It is something like the opening night at a Broadway theater, when the curtain has fallen on a new show and the cast waits anxiously for the critics' reception of the new production. The automotive industry has completed work on its new production—the 1977 models—and has run them through a series of tests and previews, and now nervously watches to see the reception they get from their critics, the general public. Will customers continue to buy as briskly as they did during the model year just ended, and will they still be as interested as they were in big cars?

Israeli Court Bars Bankers Trust From Seizing Refrigerated Ships

Special to The New York Times

TEL AVIV, Sept. 13—An Admiralty Court in Haifa has temporarily blocked the Bankers Trust Company of New York and other creditors from disposing of five refrigerated ships sailing under the Israeli flag and impounded in Britain, West Germany and Japan for alleged default in debts. Maritime Fruit Carriers Ltd., owners of the ships, told the judge the company had fully met its obligations to the creditors and that Bankers Trust was conniving with the Arab banks to liquidate the Israeli refrigerated fleet. The Israeli company further charged through its lawyers that Bankers Trust International, a subsidiary of the New York company, was planning to finance a takeover of the Israeli ships by Salem, a Swedish company operating the world's second largest fleet of refrigerated vessels.

Motive Linked to Arabs

Maritime Fruit Carriers, through subsidiaries in various countries, was said to have had the largest fleet before it ran into financial difficulties and some of its ships sold or impounded. Samuel Tamir, a lawyer for the Israeli shippers, told the court yesterday that the true motive of the New York bankers in seeking to foreclose the mortgage

American Bank Avoids Comment

By STEVEN RATTNER

The American Bank and Trust Company, a New York institution under study by bank examiners concerned about its financial stability, declined yesterday to comment on reports that it had millions of dollars in problem loans coupled with declining deposits. Abraham Feinberg, chairman, Stanley Kreitman, president, and Saul Kagan, chairman of the executive committee, continued to ignore telephone messages left at their offices, as they had on Sunday. In addition, regulatory officials declined to comment. A spokesman for the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said that, because the bank was state-chartered, a statement would have to come from New York authorities, who also declined to comment. The bank, which has four offices in New York, is being scrutinized because regulators are convinced that it can remain solvent only through substantial loans from the Federal Reserve, totaling perhaps $40 million. The bank has been showing declining deposits—from $229 million on Dec. 31, 1975, to $199 million on June 30—combined with massive problem loans. According to a confidential report, as of March 31 one-third of the bank's $152 million loan portfolio was "substandard, doubtful or lost." According to a source familiar with the bank's financial problems, the high percentage of substandard loans does not include a significant amount of real estate lending, unlike many other banks that have recently suffered high loan losses. In addition, the source contended that the bank's loan portfolio was a tangle of loans between the bank and its affiliates. However, the revelations of the bank's financial problems, reported in late editions of yesterday's New York Times, has not yet apparently affected depositors. Business at the bank's Manhattan offices appeared calm yesterday, with no signs of any massive withdrawals. "I've had an account here for 30 odd

NEW 'SUNSHINE LAW' GIVES PUBLIC ACCESS TO FEDERAL RECORDS

FORD CITES 'RULE BY PEOPLE'

Fed, S.E.C. and Ex-Im Bank Among Agencies Required to Hold Open Meetings as of March 13

By PHILIP SHABECOFF
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—President Ford signed into law today the "Government in Sunshine Act" requiring many Federal agencies to open their meetings and their records to the public. Siting, appropriately enough, in bright sunshine that flooded the White House Rose Garden as he signed the legislation, Mr. Ford said that the new law, which comes into effect on March 13, reaffirmed "America's proud heritage that the Government serves and the people rule." Senator Lawton M. Chiles Jr., the Florida Democrat who was the chief Congressional sponsor of the bill, said that the Sunshine Act would discourage the "cozy" relationships that sometimes developed between Federal regulatory agencies and the industries they are supposed to regulate. The Sunshine Law affect about 50 Federal boards, commissions and other agencies with two or more heads or directors. Many of these are independent regulatory agencies such as the Federal Power Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission, and other organizations such as the Federal Reserve Board, the Export-Import Bank and the National Science Foundation.

Exceptions for Closing

These agencies will now be required to open their meetings to public observation. The law also provides a number of exceptions that permit the agencies to close their meetings for a fairly wide variety of reasons. But even if the meetings are closed, the agencies will now be required to keep a transcript of the proceedings, in most cases, that would be available for scrutiny in case of legal action or other specified reasons. The law also prohibits informal, ex parte communications between officials of these agencies and representatives of companies or other interested persons without the agencies do business. The bill was opposed by a number of agency officials, most strongly by Dr. Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, who warned that open meetings and public disclosure of the board's proceedings could disrupt financial markets and make it difficult to obtain necessary data. Definition of Meeting Narrowed Today, however, a spokesman for the Federal Reserve Board said that Dr. Burns' objections had been resolved by changes in the legislation before it was passed. In some cases the board may close its meetings and keep minutes rather than full transcripts. Also, the law's definition of what constitutes a meeting had been narrowed somewhat, meeting another one of Dr. Burns' objections, the spokesman said. The spokesman added that the chairman now found the law acceptable.

In His Remarks While Seated in the Rose Garden, President Ford said that "in a democracy, the public has a right to know, not only what the Government decides but why and by what process."

"The Government in the Sunshine Act is in keeping with America's proud heritage that the Government serves and the people rule," he said. "This afternoon, I am delighted to sign this legislation and to reaffirm that heritage and let the sunshine in." Unalloyed Praise for Bill However, Mr. Ford's attitude toward the Sunshine Law appeared somewhat less clear than the light that bathed the White House lawn. While his statement before the television cameras in the Rose Garden conveyed unalloyed praise for the bill, his prepared statement, issued by the White House press office, expressed several significant reservations. The "most serious problem" with the bill, the President said in his prepared statement, is that the new act takes precedence over provisions of the Freedom of Information Act that exempt certain information from public disclosure. In the statement, Mr. Ford also com-

AUTO STRIKE FEARS SEND MARKET DOWN

Dow Off 5.07 — Ford, Target Company, Unchanged at 55 3/4

By ALEXANDER R. HAMMER

Fears of a strike against the Ford Motor Company sent the stock market moderately lower yesterday in continued slow trading. At the close, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 5.07 points at 963.29, its low for the day.

Analysts noted that the latest reports from the auto contract talks were pessimistic that issues could be settled before the deadline at midnight tonight. A prolonged strike by the United Auto Workers could hurt the nation's economy, which has been recovering slowly. Ford closed unchanged yesterday at 55 3/4 in active trading.

Robert H. Stovall, director of investment policy of Reynolds Securities, observed that the United Auto Workers leadership probably would seek at least the 30 percent-plus settlement won recently by the rubber workers union.

Price Pull Back Seen Mr. Stovall said that in that case "labor and Ford Motor may be forced into a strike that neither wants." He added that the strike's implications were nationwide "since one out of every seven industrial workers is in auto-related industries."

Another Wall Streeter, Alan C. Poole, vice president of Laidlaw-Coggeshall Inc., commented that failure of the market to follow through on the pre-Labor Day rally, plus fears of a probable Ford strike, "has caused prices to pull back once again."

Mr. Poole said that some analysts were beginning to believe that the 1,000 level in the Dow remains a ceiling and that the "next test will be at the 960 low of the trading range of the last seven months."

You're looking at one of the largest financial structures in the world.

In terms of assets, experience and expertise, the Bankers Trust symbol should be recognized as a landmark.
But, to many people, we're still just "the bank for trusts."
For 25 years, this bank for trusts has been one of the 10 largest commercial banks in the nation. (At the moment, we rank seventh.)
Our assets are over 19 billion dollars.
Our scope is worldwide, in thirty-four countries on six continents.
We've been a major financial presence in New York for over 70 years, in London for over 50 years. Our dealings with Sweden and Brazil, for example, go back over 60 years, with Moscow nearly 15 years. We offer a staggering variety of quality services. A list of our divisions alone would fill up this page.

As you might expect, our staff is professional to the core. But that doesn't mean we're traditional to the core. We've been responsible for a wide variety of banking innovations.
Like the Floating Rate Note in the Eurobond market. Or the first computerized letter of credit system.
Or the Money Center, a modern centralized headquarters for dealing with government and municipal bonds, foreign exchange, and money market instruments.
And yes, we're also "the bank for trusts"—the pre-eminent bank in the field of employee benefits, a leader in almost every aspect of trust administration and investment.

Not to mention the nation's foremost Directed Trustee, the recognized pioneer in the fields of benefits research, savings plans, stock purchase plans, and employee record keeping, to name a few areas.
Wherever you see the Bankers Trust Pyramid, you're dealing with a full service bank in the fullest sense of the word, with the capacity to raise, lend and manage money worldwide.
Ask anyone who has done business with us—a visit to the Pyramid can be a rewarding experience.

WOOLWORTH TO SELL ITS CREDIT OPERATION

Sale to G.E. Credit Corp. of Customer Accounts of About $175 Million Is Tentative

The F. W. Woolworth Company announced plans yesterday for the sale of about $175 million in customer accounts receivable of its Woolco and Woolworth department store operations in this country to the General Electric Credit Corporation.

Woolworth also said that General Electric Credit, the financing arm of the General Electric Company, would take over the operation of the Woolco and Woolworth customer credit programs, involving 1.1 million active customer accounts in about 300 stores.

Spokesmen for both Woolworth and General Electric Credit stressed that the agreement for the sale was tentative and was subject to the formulation of a definitive contract that would then require the approval of the directors of both concerns.

The sale will be for cash, according to Woolworth's announcement, but spokesmen for both organizations declined to say how much.

When asked whether the sale of the receivables was to be made at a discount from their face value, the Woolworth spokesman said: "There was a discount, but this amounts to less than 1 percent."

In announcing the proposed transaction, Lester A. Burcham, chairman of Woolworth, said: "Although Woolworth is comfortably strong financially, this action would provide additional latitude for programmed growth. It also would improve the return on assets employed in the U.S. Woolco and Woolworth operations and, in effect, take us out of the financing

Corporation Affairs

Shell UK and Esso Unable to Agree on British Plan

Representatives of Shell UK Ltd. and Esso Petroleum Ltd., meeting in London yesterday, were unable to agree to British Government proposals for its participation to their North Sea oil operations. It was understood representatives of the two companies met for three hours with Anthony Wedgwood Benn, British Secretary of State for Energy Affairs.

Anthony Wedgwood Benn, British energy chief.

The British Government has proposed giving an option on 51 percent of the North Sea oil supplies, similar to the earlier agreement reached with the British Petroleum Company.

Under the agreement with B.P., the British National Oil Corporation has an option to take 51 percent of B.P.'s oil from 1977 but will sell back 100 percent of this oil to 1977 and 1978.

Vickers Greek Plant

Vickers Ltd. has been holding talks with Greek officials about the possibility of establishing an assembly plant in Greece to produce tanks for the military. A company spokesman said the talks have been going on for some time and that it was not known when they would be completed.

Hess Amerada Plans a Port

The Hess Amerada Oil Company and Gm. Cyril E. King of the United States Virgin Islands have initiated an agreement for the company to build a container port next to its refinery on the south shore of St. Croix. The agreement is subject to ratification by the Virgin Islands legislature, but it is considered certain.

Under the agreement the Government would lease to Hess rights to offshore lands near the refinery, which will be used by the company to build a pipeline and dredge new channels. In return, the Virgin Islands would obtain a harbor facility capable of accommodating cargo from large freighters.

Mohawk Data Arranges Credit

The Mohawk Data Sciences Corporation said it had completed arrangements for a new multicurrency credit agreement, providing for a revolving line of credit to the company and its international subsidiaries through July 31, 1979. The First National Bank of Boston and the First National Bank of will provide services of an engineering, constructing and mining associate. The project involves development of a mine, a 35-mile slurry pipeline and construction of port facilities for loading vessels with 7.5 million tons of concentrates a year.

Lone Star Plans To Replace Plant

Lone Star Industries has announced plans for a new sand and gravel plant near Sacramento, Calif. The company said work on the facility, expected to cost more than $12 million, would begin immediately with the objective of having it in production by the end of next year.

Carrier Unit Gets Contract for Plant

The Carrier International Corporation, a subsidiary of the Carrier Corporation, announced receipt of a multimillion-dollar contract for the construction of what it called the world's largest central refrigeration plant. The equipment, consisting of eight centrifugal refrigeration machines, will be used to cool service water for the reactors in two new nuclear generating plants in Iran.

Treasury Bill Yields Mixed at Weekly Sale

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 — Yields were mixed on Treasury bills auctioned today in both the 91-day and 180-day maturities. The average rate for the three-month bill was 5.089 percent, up from 5.087 percent for the preceding week.

power stations are scheduled to be in operation by 1980 and 1981.

Ford Unit Awards Satellite Contract

The Aerocoustic Ford Corporation, a subsidiary of the Ford Motor Company, has been awarded a $235.5 million contract to build seven Intelsat V space satellites for the 94-nation International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (Intelsat).

The Ford company said that the contract was the largest award ever made for a commercial satellite communications system. The new spacecraft will represent the next, larger-capacity generation of global communications satellites.

They are to be launched, starting in 1979, to broaden telecommunications among multi-million-dollar earth stations around the world. Such satellites now carry about half of the world's intercontinental telephone calls and all intercontinental television transmissions.

Gerber and Peso

The Gerber Products Company said that the recent devaluation of the Mexican peso would have a negative effect on its third quarter ending Dec. 31. It said that if there was a continuation of the current floating rate, representing an effective devaluation of about 37 percent below the previous fixed rate of 12.50 pesos to the dollar, the maximum nonconcurring charges in its current operations would be $2.2 million for inventory and $600,000 for non-inventoried assets.

Report from Number One Wall Street

John Rabaglia, Assistant Secretary, J. Robert Murdoch, Vice President, Bryan J. Taylor, Vice President, Energy and Minerals Department.

The global resource specialists. The Irving's Energy and Minerals people have a worldwide outlook because extractive industries are a global business. The Department's specialists know natural resources throughout the world.

"In project lending," says Bob Murdoch, head of the Irving's Energy and Minerals Department, "we evaluate natural resources that aren't on the balance sheet and that call for special knowledge, skills and experience, in addition to those needed for balance sheet lending. In conventional loans, credit and bank lending criteria are established from audited statements."

The Irving's E.S.M. people must be able to verify estimates of ore and petroleum reserves, evaluate the production method to be used, and determine the potential market value of the resource once it is extracted.

That's why the Irving's team is made up of people like Bob Murdoch, a former reservoir engineer for a major oil company; Bryan Taylor, who was an engineer for a major mining company; and John Rabaglia, a chemical engineer who specializes in petrochemical projects.

The Irving has extensive experience in arranging loans for petroleum, coal, bauxite and copper projects. For instance, the bank recently structured and syndicated a large term-loan for a new bauxite mine in Brazil. It also participated in the financing of a multimillion dollar grass roots U.S. refinery and made loans and commitments that will help put four major North Sea fields into production.

In the United States, the Energy and Minerals Department is an important lender to both eastern and western energy projects. This experience has given the Department an invaluable reference base for structuring financing related to future energy production.

Says Bob Murdoch, "Here and overseas, too, our unique project lending team is ready to tackle the most complex problems in developing new oil and mineral resources."

John A. Tompkins, Vice President, Public Utilities Department.

Power to utilities.

"The continued growth of our economy is directly related to the strength of our utilities," says Tony McCall. "Without energy and communications the country simply can't grow."

Tony's approach to utility financing is realistic. He and his staff believe utilities must provide consumers with the best possible service at the lowest possible cost, while rewarding fairly both the investor and the employee. This requires working closely, not only with the industry, but with regulatory agencies as well.

For 25 years the Irving has conducted week-long seminars to help utility regulators and executives better understand the complexities of corporate finance. Across the country, almost every major public utility commission and utility company has an Irving graduate.

As another service, every month the Irving's Public Utilities Department issues a Utilities Financing Calendar. It's the "bible," and the entire industry uses it to provide for the orderly financing of public equity and debt offerings. With the capital intensive nature of utilities, it's one of the most valuable tools on Wall Street.

"Our expertise in the field of public utility financing makes us unique," says McCall. "It's the kind of expertise that takes years to build and hard work to maintain. But at the Irving, that's what banking is all about."

PUBLIC NOTICE
LIFE OF NEW YORK
SERVICE COMMISSION
ALBANY

Proceeding on motion of the Commission and sub-metering for elec-

August 27, 1976

hereby given that a prehearing conference-entitled proceeding will be held at William H. Arkin at the offices of the Commission, Empire State Plaza, York, pursuant to §66 of the Public Service Law, September 23, 1976, at 10:00 A.M. as a threshold step to the scheduling of a hearing to be held by order of the Commission on September 16, 1976 in Opinion No. 76-17.

The proceeding was initiated by show cause order issued April 20, 1976 for reconsideration of policies heretofore in effect regarding sub-metering of electric energy consumed at residential construction and to permit landlords of subsidized housing at sub-meter electric energy consumed. It left open for later determination of an evidentiary hearing the question of whether the residential sub-metering should be extended to certain tenancy arrangements in cooperative housing and Consolidated Edison of New York, Inc. and the sub-metering practices in its service areas.

The conference is designed to elicit suggestions consistent with the public interest as a guide to the Commission's decision on the matters discussed in the order, and the scheduling of dates for the hearing and for the presentation of public testimony.

Written testimony and prefilings should be made available for inspection at the Commission, Empire State Plaza, New York, and World Trade Center.

Taxes & Accounting
A Glamour Profession for C.P.A.'s

By LOWELL BONFELD
If the figures don't lie, public accounting, despite its staid image, may be one of the glamour professions of the 1970's for college students. The reason, according to Charles G. Steele, the partner in charge of personnel and administration at Haskins & Sells, is simply that jobs are available for graduates in the profession.

Citing an annual study prepared for the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, Mr. Steele points out that for the academic year 1975-76 there will be about 45,000 students who graduate with accounting majors. Of these, about 18,000 will want to go into public accounting and about 14,000 will be able to get employment in public accounting. Mr. Steele added that the remaining students who do wish to enter public accounting will likely enter fields such as business, to which they will put their accounting backgrounds to use.

More illustrative of the boom in public accounting, Mr. Steele said, was "the tremendous increase in what we see in the way of students who will graduate in '77 and '78 over what people predicted in 1974." The A.I.C.P.A.'s annual study on accounting graduates done in the spring of 1974 projected the supply for 1975-76 at 36,900 graduates, for 1976-77 at 39,000 and 1977-78 at 40,600. The actual figures for 1975-76 turned out to be 44,800 and for 1976-77 there are 48,700. The A.I.C.P.A.'s projection for 1977-78, which was made last spring, was up to 51,100, more than 25 percent above the projection made two years earlier. Haskins & Sells, Mr. Steele says, visits 400 accounting schools during the year. The firm, which has nearly 500 partners and a total of 4,000 accountants, will interview about 15,000 students and make offers to about 1,700 of them. Of these, it expects about 800 to accept its offer.

"Up-or-Out Personnel Policy"
The College Placement Council's salary survey made last March shows that the range of starting salaries for accounting graduates with a bachelor's degree is from $12,500 to $13,500. For those with a master's degree, it is between $15,000 and $16,000. At a Big Eight firm like Haskins & Sells, starting salaries are at the upper end of these salary ranges.

Of the new accountants hired by Haskins & Sells, Mr. Steele said, about 10 percent will eventually become partners. The usual period of time spent with the firm before becoming a partner is 11 years. By that time, only 18 percent of the original number of new accountants hired are expected to be with the firm.

In fact, after three years about one-half will have left the firm. The reason for this is what Mr. Steele calls the major public accounting firms' "up-or-out personnel policy." Despite the excellent prospects for the current crop of accounting students, Mr. Steele sees problems ahead. "If the growth in the number of accounting students continues at this rate, there will be students who can't get a job in three or four years," he said.

Tax Reform Act Seeks To End Home Deduction

The end of the deduction for the part-time use of a home as an office is at hand if the Tax Reform Act of 1976 becomes law. This deduction—a favorite of part-time writers, teachers and many others—would be ended for most taxpayers under provisions agreed upon by members of the House-Senate Conference Committee that ironed out the differences in the bills passed by each chamber.

While a taxpayer's ability to take the home-office deduction had been severely limited by recent Tax Court decisions, they were still more liberal than what would be allowed under the new tax legislation.

Under the provisions agreed upon by the conferees, with very strict exceptions, no deduction would be allowed for the office use of a portion of a taxpayer's home if the home was used by the taxpayer as his residence during the taxable year.

Exceptions to the general rule include those times when the home is also regularly used as the taxpayer's principal place of business, or the sole fixed location of a taxpayer's business that sells goods or services at retail or wholesale, but only if it is used in connection with such sales, or as a place of business for meeting or dealing with patients, clients or customers in the normal course of business.

The bill also allows exceptions when the employer provides an office or fixed location for the employee in connection with the employer's trade or business. The conferees also accepted a provision of the Senate bill that allows a deduction when there is a separate structure not attached to the house that is used on a regular basis for business purposes.

Built-in speakerphone
A stand-alone electronic unit of advanced design, Quantum V offers five-line capability, intercom and a high-fidelity speakerphone all beautifully combined into one supremely functional desk piece. Now you can say "ciao" to that unsightly speaker box and separate intercom that have been cluttering your desk top so long.
3-party conferencing
Quantum V also lets you conference three ways, saving you time and reducing communication lag. No longer will your client wait impatiently while you juggle two or three handsets simultaneously. And speaking of handsets, Quantum V's handset has been painstakingly engineered to provide the most comfortably contoured, lightweight design possible.

Automatic answering feature
If you frequently work away from your desk, Quantum V will automatically answer an incoming call on the speakerphone line. The call is announced with a single splash tone, and is automatically placed on the speakerphone, permitting you to speak with the caller hands-free from anywhere in your office.

After a period of twenty seconds, you may continue the call as normal by touching the speaker key, or allow the phone to return to its automatic answer mode as before.
Touch dialing now!
Quantum V's unique control panel design has a mylar membrane switch assembly that permits fast, accurate touch dialing. Built-in electronics make this possible even if your present phone has a rotary dial. So if you own your present telephone system, or are thinking of having one installed, call the Quantum V dealer listed below, and get acquainted with the world's most advanced conversation piece.

Grumman Charged With Bid to Fund Election Campaign election campaign, Dr. Cheatham was told that Grumman had sold the E2C reconnaissance aircraft to Japan.

Aircraft Recalled

In an interview, Mr. Allen, who had been the national economic policy adviser at a meeting with Dr. Cheatham, said that Grumman had denied any involvement in the sale.

"It's ludicrous," Mr. Allen said, "that everybody is talking about doing with this sale."

It was later by the White House that the sale of the aircraft to Japan was a "never-ending" campaign, or at least a campaign, at any time, Dr. Cheatham reaffirmed to a telephone interview that it happened," he said.

A Grumman E2C airborne early warning radar aircraft.

White House Sought

The subcommittee was told by Senator Frank Lautenberg, that he had written to urge White House officials to investigate Grumman's efforts to sell reconnaissance plane to Japan.

Dr. Cheatham said he told Mr. Allen that the request "was something I could not respond to" and arranged for later meetings with Grumman officials at Bethesda.

At that point, Senator Church specifically asked Dr. Cheatham whether he understood Mr. Allen to be saying that it would cost the company $1 million in a re-election campaign contribution to gain President Nixon's help in arranging the sale, Dr. Cheatham answered, "Yes."

to Japan would be a difficult thing and it would take a great deal of effort."

Officials at Grumman "should be grateful" for the White House aid, Dr. Cheatham further recalled the White House official as saying. He said he then asked Mr. Allen what such aid was worth.

"Oh, I think the E2C is worth about $1 million," Dr. Cheatham quoted Mr. Allen as having said.

Dr. Cheatham said he told Mr. Allen that the request "was something I could not respond to" and arranged for later meetings with Grumman officials at Bethesda.

also said they knew of no such involvement.

Dr. Cheatham testified that the proposed sale was formally discussed during the Nixon-Tanaka meeting in Honolulu.

That discussion, the former Grumman official said, apparently took place at a lower-level talks involving Ambassador Marshall Green, who was Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, and his Japanese counterpart.

Ambassador Green, who is the State Department Coordinator of Population Affairs, was on vacation and could not be reached directly today. Speaking through his secretary, Miss Gloria Glasgow, however, Mr. Green said, "There was no White House pressure or any pressure to discuss the E2C" during the Honolulu summit. Mr. Green also was quoted as having said that he did not specifically recall any discussion of the aircraft. Any such talks, if they were held, he said, were "a minor issue."

Joseph G. Gavin Jr., former head of Grumman Corporation subsidiary, testified in Washington yesterday.

After today's hearing, Senator Church said his subcommittee would "follow through" on the Cheatham allegations. Staff members also said the official records of the Honolulu summit meeting would be sought before the subcommittee's next scheduled public hearings on Sept. 24.

Iran Sales Drive Discussed

Along with the allegations of payoff requests, today's hearing also dealt with Grumman's F-14 sales campaign inside Iran prior to the Nixon Administration's decision in 1972 to permit the aircraft's foreign sales.

Mr. Gavin, the current Grumman president, defended such efforts—which took place inside Iran as well as among Iranian military attaches—as "fully legal and proper."

Dr. Cheatham said he told Mr. Allen that the request "was something I could not respond to" and arranged for later meetings with Grumman officials at Bethesda.

At that point, Senator Church specifically asked Dr. Cheatham whether he understood Mr. Allen to be saying that it would cost the company $1 million in a re-election campaign contribution to gain President Nixon's help in arranging the sale, Dr. Cheatham answered, "Yes."

"If such a conversation took place other than in the White House," the Senator then asked, "wouldn't that be commonly referred to as a shakedown?"

"Well," Dr. Cheatham said, with a smile, "we have various words here in Washington," citing, among others, the "giving of advice." Asked again whether he considered Mr. Allen's request to be a shakedown, he said, "Yes, something of that sort."

Number of Witnesses Summoned

Today's testimony obviously caught members of the subcommittee as well as the Grumman Corporation by surprise. A number of witnesses had been summoned to testify about Grumman's payment of $6 million in agents' fees and its selling campaign stemming from Iran's decision in 1974 to purchase $2.2 billion worth of F-14 fighters.

Two current Grumman officials, Joseph G. Gavin Jr., the company's president, and Peter Oran, president of Grumman International, its foreign sales subsidiary, told the subcommittee that Dr. Cheatham's testimony was the first they had heard of the alleged payment request.

After today's hearing, Senator Church said his subcommittee would "follow through" on the Cheatham allegations. Staff members also said the official records of the Honolulu summit meeting would be sought before the subcommittee's next scheduled public hearings on Sept. 24.

Iran Sales Drive Discussed

Along with the allegations of payoff requests, today's hearing also dealt with Grumman's F-14 sales campaign inside Iran prior to the Nixon Administration's decision in 1972 to permit the aircraft's foreign sales.

Mr. Gavin, the current Grumman president, defended such efforts—which took place inside Iran as well as among Iranian military attaches—as "fully legal and proper."

Mr. Allen walked to the halls of the Executive Office Building, which is next door to a street exit.

Dr. Cheatham testified that he had been "changed from the list," with Mr. Allen also was involved in the Nixon re-election campaign.

Dr. Cheatham said, "with Allen pointing assistance to the sale."

In response to questions, both men acknowledged that any payment decisions would have been made at levels above them at the time.

A check of newspaper files today showed no evidence that Grumman had become publicly entangled in the various investigations stemming from the Republican re-election committee's 1972 efforts to generate millions of dollars in cash contributions. Former Watergate investigators, questioned by telephone today, plained that the definition of what constituted a meeting of members of Government agencies was too "ambiguous."

SUNSHINE LAW GIVES ACCESS TO MEETINGS

Senator Chiles, who has pushed for the Sunshine legislation for four years, had no reservations and predicted the bill would accomplish nothing but good for the Government and for the nation.

He noted in a telephone interview that many of the regulatory agencies were run by people who came from and returned to the very industries they were supposed to regulate. The new law, he said, would help make sure that such relationships are not abused.

Mr. Ford, whose campaign strategy calls for him to spend much of his time in the White House being "presidential," signed a second bill before the television cameras insuring that farmers get paid for the livestock they sell to meat packers.

Protection for Farmers

The bill requires packers who buy $500,000 or more worth of livestock a year to post "reasonable" bonds to make sure that the farmers do not lose their payment if the packing company goes bankrupt.

President Ford also vetoed today a bill that would have provided $160 million for the development of an electric motor for automobiles. It was Mr. Ford's 56th veto since becoming President two years and a month ago.

Mr. Ford, in his veto message, said that a practical battery must be developed by private industry before an electric auto motor was feasible and added that it would be "premature and wasteful for the Federal Government to engage in a massive demonstration program."

dent, defended such efforts—which took place inside Iran as well as among Iranian military attaches—as "fully legal and proper."

"The issue is not one of legality," Senator Church said at one point, "but whether—in the sense of national security—such efforts should be made prior to a national decision of the United States Government that such a sale was in the country's best interests."

"Our concern," the Senator added, "is whether the Government is waggling the tail of the aircraft company or whether the aircraft company is waggling the tail of the Government," regarding the foreign sale of such classified weapons systems. "It's not an easy question at all."

SHOULD NEW YORK BONDS BE BOUGHT?

Yes, in our opinion. Because of the problems of New York City and other Northeast municipalities, prices of certain sound New York tax-exempt municipal obligations are depressed. We believe the following selected issues are currently undervalued and offer investors an exceptional opportunity for a high investment return.

NEW YORK POWER AUTHORITY

Providing a third of the power generated in New York—and the cheapest power in N.Y. State—Power Authority Bonds are secured by the net revenues of individual projects offering sound coverage. Bond Reserve Funds add additional security to the bonds.

NEW YORK HOUSING FINANCE AGENCY STATE UNIVERSITY CONSTRUCTION BONDS

Interest and repayment of principal at maturity are amply covered by University revenues comprised of tuition, hospital and clinic and food service which make State University Construction Bonds one of the strongest bonds under the HFA program.

COUNTY OF SUFFOLK, NEW YORK SEWER DISTRICT BONDS

A general obligation of the County with interest and principal at maturity payable in the first instance from District revenues and additionally secured (in 1980 when the System will have been completed) by a piece of the first cent of an existing three cent County sales tax and a levy upon property within the District. Further, should the need arise, all taxable property within the County is subject to the levy of ad valorem taxes without limitation to pay debt service.

LAKEWOOD, Calif., Sept. 13 (UPI)—The Purex Corporation disclosed today that an internal survey of its management employees revealed three instances of "questionable payments" to customers and foreign government officials amounting to more than $200,000.

In a press release prepared by the company, Purex said the "questionable payments" had turned up in the survey, which covered the four-year period ending with June 30, 1976.

Roderick M. Hills of the S.E.C.

Purex's president, William R. Tincher, said, however, that no illegal domestic or foreign political payments had shown up.

one high executive indicated "ran around 9 percent."

The hint seemed to be not only an inclination to ignore President Ford's suggestion last week that the auto companies backtrack on their intended price increases but also the possibility of further price rises for cars if their new labor contract proves to be more costly than estimated or their suppliers come along with significantly higher prices for materials later.

On the assumption that the current auto wage talks will be resolved without a lengthy strike and a more expensive settlement than calculated, the auto industry is supremely confident about the new model year. But, of course, that is the usual posture here every year at this time.

Top executives such as Thomas A. Murphy, G.M.'s chairman, and John J. Riccardo, Chrysler's chairman, said in recent interviews in their offices that they believed their hushed expectations were realistic. What makes them so optimistic?

'All the Ingredients Are Present'

Mr. Murphy said he was encouraged because "all the ingredients are present for a good, firm tone in our economy as long as the consumer remains confident to spend the money he has, and he has plenty of money and an unusually higher amount of savings."

"We think we're being conservative in saying 1977 should be a good year for us," Mr. Murphy added. "It could be a boom year because there might be demand out there that was unsatisfied in the adjustment process of 1973 and 1974. But I'm careful to realize no one has to go out there and buy cars. As a nation, we have to keep inflation under control and avoid a repetition of the problems we all had a few years ago."

Mr. Riccardo spoke in much the same vein. "We're very bullish about the year ahead," he said. "We see a continuation of very solid conditions in the economy and in consumer confidence. The auto industry was below its long-term sales trend the last few years when a lot of people didn't buy cars, because of economic conditions. We should be getting back to that trendline. As the economy improves, the people most hurt by the recession are coming back into the market."

In addition to the consumer's strong buying position, Chrysler's chief executive indicated he was banking on the high scrappage rate of cars, increased family formations, more multicar families and the continued move to compact cars to help industry sales.

There is little difference among the estimates of the Big Three for new car and truck business in the model year ahead. They are all looking for car sales, including imports, to run around 11 million vehicles and truck sales to be in the vicinity of 2.2 million units.

If the market turns out that way, the industry's volume could show a gain of around 10 percent from this year's achievement and virtually match the results of 1973, its record year. The industry's predictions a year ago turned out to be a little on the low side, except those of Mr. Murphy, who was right on target in projecting a gain of around 20 percent for car and truck sales over the depressed level of 1975.

A good year for the whole economy will turn heavily on the experience of the auto companies in the upcoming model year since one of every six companies in the United States, and one in every seven jobs, relates to automotive operations. In 1975, when its business was not good, the auto industry employed nearly 800,000 persons and had sales exceeding $33 billion. The current year was certainly greatly improved and, auto executives say, 1977 should be measurably better.

Severe Drought in Wales Forces Monsanto Co. to Drill for Water

speak freely of crisis, crunches and doomsdays. Doomsday, the moment when the reservoirs run absolutely dry, will arrive without additional rain on Nov. 30, according to the water authority. But it's an elastic date, because before then, rationing would have been extended.

"Doomsday presupposes that the Government won't do anything to mitigate this crisis situation," said John Collins, an officer of the Welsh arm of the Confederation of British Industry, "and we believe that the Government will do something."

Mr. Shearn, who holds a doctorate in chemical engineering, is, like the other plant managers here, trying to save water and to find more water.

Company Recycles Some Water

The company recycles some of its process water, and it has gone to some lengths to make even token savings. It has slowed the frequency of timing devices that automatically flush urinals. It has switched from ceramic coffee mugs to plastic cups. It collects rainwater from its roofs for piping into the production processes, and it has ceased washing its vehicles and the roads through its plants.

"As a chemicals plant, we have to do a certain amount of washing down," said Bowen Williams, the executive in charge of the company's drought effort, "but we're trying to cut down on the cosmetic part."

The resulting savings, he said, were relative, but they help encourage workers to act on their savings in a greater way—by reporting or fixing leaks in the plants. There will be greater savings, he said, when Monsanto installs more recycling equipment.

Obtaining water to replace whatever the water authority cuts could be costly. The company has not yet committed itself fully to taking the tank cars, but when it does, Mr. Shearn said, it then faces the cost of cleaning them and a commitment to pay rent on them after they may no longer be needed.

Drilling for water will be relatively cheap, he said, but there is a problem. Whatever water Monsanto might strike is water that still belongs to Wales. If pumping it means draining pastureland of its water, the water authority is likely to order that it stay in the ground. And if pumping it poses no threat to other users, Monsanto will still have to pay for it.

Paying is becoming a problem. Just three years ago, Mr. Shearn said, the company was charged 12 pence—21 cents—for each thousand gallons it used. Now it is charged 56 pence, the equivalent of $1. On 1.25 million gallons a day, that works out to $438,000 a year.

American Bank Avoids Comment

years and they've been in business that long," said one middle-aged executive yesterday as he left the bank's glass-walled branch at Pine and Pear Streets in Manhattan's financial district. "That's all I know."

"I'm in banking and I hadn't heard it," another customer said.

One group that apparently is worried, however, is the bank's small number of individual shareowners. (The majority of the stock is owned by the Continental Trade Bank, a Swiss corporation.)

One shareowner, concerned about the fate of his investment, reported calling the bank's executive offices, which are on two floors of the lavish Olympic Tower, and being told to call back today. The bank has been closely linked with a number of political figures, including Mayor Beame, who served as a director and chairman of the finance committee while between terms as City Controller. In addition, Mr. Feinberg, the bank's chairman, was publicly criticized by the state Superintendent of Banks in 1974 for allowing his bank's mailing list to be used to solicit funds for Mr. Beame's mayoral primary campaign in 1973.

The financial problems at American Bank and Trust were brought to light during a routine examination by both Federal and state officials begun in March.

Levi Strauss Reports Payments

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13—Levi Strauss & Company disclosed today in a document filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission that it made questionable foreign payments of about $70,000 through three foreign subsidiaries in 1974 and 1975. This was in addition to $75,000 in similar payments the company reported earlier this year. The San Francisco-based denim-products producer said no officers or directors had any prior knowledge of the payments and that its investigation was now ended.

The New York Times Large Type Weekly

Many people with the greatest curiosity about the world have difficulty reading the print in a daily newspaper.

So they just skim the headlines. Or they give up reading newspapers altogether.

Perhaps there are people like this in your family or among your friends who really miss the chance to read and absorb the news in depth as they did in the past.

For them, The New York Times publishes the Large Type Weekly, a weekly newspaper with words more than twice the size of regular newspaper print—as big as some headlines.

Make this test

See for yourself what a remarkable difference large print makes. Hold this page at full arm's length and read the paragraphs below:

This is regular size print used in most news publications. To read it is a strain for people who have poor vision.

This is the size print used in the Large Type Weekly. See how much easier it is to read.

Covers news and features from the regular New York Times

The Large Type Weekly contains a review of the week's major news events from the Sunday Times. Analyses by respected New York Times columnists. News of business and finance... the arts and entertainment... sports... family-style features. There's even a full-page crossword puzzle and a listing of TV highlights.

A thoughtful gift

Small Vacations for Big Ad Men.

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

John E. O'Toole, the silver-tongued president of Foote, Cone & Belding, will be in Los Angeles tomorrow to give a speech entitled "What I did on my summer vacation." Has a familiar ring, hasn't it?

The title will have nothing to do with the text, but Mr. O'Toole will confess that he used it because it brought him an "A" on a fifth grade composition. However, it did bring up the question. How do top agency types spend their summers? Working, mostly. A check with a dozen or so of some of the biggest folks in the business shows that they didn't take much vacation time, unlike some people who shall remain nameless.

Some took no time off at all, others took occasional long weekends. Quite a number took a week or two. Paul Foley, president of the Interpublic Group of Companies, was away for three weeks, but you really couldn't call it a vacation. He spent one week at Saratoga, where, besides helping improve the breed, he had meetings with a client, the New York Racing Association. The remainder of the time he spent right here in town, getting from three to five calls a day from the office. That's why he called it "a myth vacation."

areas provide plenty of summer activity. Mr. Seaman might not even require a vacation this year, so elated is he over the first hole-in-one he's ever shot. That golf nut's dream came true for him during a mixed tournament at the Country Club of New Canaan on July 24 and Mr. Seaman remembers every detail vividly—185 yards into a slight breeze.

But while up in Saratoga he did run into Joseph R. Daly, chairman of Doyle Dene Bernbach, who, with his family, had taken two cottages (he called them "villas") on Lake George. "We swam in the morning, cooked out at night and in the afternoon we beat the horses," he reported. He took two weeks.

No vacation at all for Robert E. Jacoby, president of Ted Bates & Company, who's just been too busy to get away, or for Leo-Arthur Kelmanson, president of Kenyon & Eckhardt. The latter did weekend at Remsenburg, L.I., but the hectic preparation for new car introduction time (he has the Mercury account) has kept him close to New York. He is seriously considering a month in the south of France—his first vacation since he got in the business.

Don Johnston, president of J. Walter Thompson, didn't have a vacation either. He spent his time winning the Burger King account. That did more for him than any vacation could.

When reached by phone just before Labor Day, William E. Phillips, president of Ogilvy & Mather, said he was just back from nine days at his cottage in Saybrook, Conn. "I was getting my body in shape for next month, when I'm going to try to climb the Matterhorn," he said. And he wasn't kidding. He leaves for Switzerland on Thursday to face a challenge almost as great as the Big Apple campaign for New York City.

WGR Net Up 160.3%

Wells, Rich, Greece reported a 160.3 percent increase in net income for the third quarter ended July 31, compared with the similar period in 1975.

For nine months gross income was up 3.6 percent to $20.9 million but net income was down 20.3 percent to $707,154 or $1.55 a share compared to $1.91. For the quarter, however, gross income was up 15 percent to $7.2 million while net income was $295,218, or 62 cents a share, compared with 25 cents a share.

Introducing a Whisky

Ted Bates & Company, which does all the advertising for the alcoholic beverages marketed by Julius Wile Soos & Company, is also handling the trade and point-of-purchase advertising for Old Canada, a premium bulk 86.8 proof Canadian whisky that the House of Wile is getting ready to introduce in more than 20 major markets.

Consumer media advertising will follow and will use the theme "The Pride of the Master Blender." According to Wile, most, if not all, bulk Canadians are only 80 proof, so Old Canada does have a consumer benefit. Whoopee.

Belgrade Lakes, near Waterville, Me., is where John S. Bowen, president of Benton & Bowles, spent a week with his family for "a complete change of scene" from his usual Third Avenue milieu. He chopped wood and put a roof on a house and generally exhibited chief executive officer qualities. He'll be getting more vacation time during the year—slipping in an occasional week off when business takes him abroad.

Two Quarter Pagets

Hamilton Beach, the kitchen appliance maker, and Hicks & Greist, its agency, figure that they'll be getting full-page magazine advertising impact from two quarter-pagets placed diagonally on a page of editorial matter.

They also believe the arrangement will help them pinpoint their prospects, advertising individual appliances in areas where there is thought to be the most interest in them.

Three months of advertising begins in October in Better Homes & Gardens, House and Garden, Southern Living, Sphere and Sunset.

Both Carl W. Nichols Jr., chairman of Cunningham & Walsh, and Alfred J. Seaman, president of SSC&B, who live in Connecticut and Long Island, respectively, prefer the fall or winter vacation bit, since their own home

Manufacturers Hanover Expects Profit to Gain

Earnings of the Manufacturers Hanover Corporation in the third quarter of this year will show improvement over this year's second quarter, and over the third quarter of 1975, Gabriel Hauge, the company's chairman, predicted yesterday.

In response to questions by newsmen at a luncheon meeting, Mr. Hauge noted that the earnings of the company, which is the parent of the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company, has trailed the year-earlier levels in the first and second quarters of 1976.

Mr. Hauge attributed the improvement in the present quarter mainly to better cost controls and to certain fee income. He said the net interest spread of Manufacturers Hanover Trust had not improved. This spread represents the difference between the cost of a bank's funds and what it receives when it lends them.

Llewellyn Jenkins, executive vice president in charge of the bank's corporate division, said loan demand from corporate borrowers, which has been slack for most banks for more than a year, would probably begin to improve in the next 60 to 90 days, although no dramatic improvement could be expected until the first quarter of next year.

In light of the soft loan demand, Mr. Hauge was asked whether Manufacturers Hanover would support a reduction in the prime lending rate, currently at 7 percent. "We would not be disposed to move in that direction," he said, noting that he doubted whether loan demand would improve in response to a rate cut.

Julio and Brenda Gonzalez, a husband-and-wife team, yesterday became the first known minority business enterprise to win President Ford's "E" award for excellence in exporting.

The Gonzales—he is from Cuba—are the sole employees of Gonzalez International Inc., a Baltimore company that exports and imports tobacco equipment and machinery. In presenting the joint award, Elliott L. Richardson, Secretary of Commerce, noted that Mrs. Gonzalez, a Cherokee native American, had played "a key role" in developing the company, which was founded in 1964.

The Phillips Petroleum Company said yesterday that W. F. Martin would continue as chairman and chief executive officer despite his indictment Sept. 2 on tax fraud charges. The company said that the decision was taken by unanimous vote of its board of directors.

Mr. Martin and two of the company's former chairmen and presidents, W. W. Keeler and Stanley F. Learned, pleaded not guilty yesterday to charges of a federal grand jury in Tulsa, Okla., that they took part in a global conspiracy to conceal $3 million in Swiss bank accounts and at a cache at company headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla. Government investigations led to charges of use of the money for illegal contributions to the Nixon campaign and co concealment of the fund from tax collectors.

Elizabeth Taylor may be on the way to becoming the diamond trade's best friend. The actress has joined a group of diamond executives in forming the Elizabeth Taylor Diamond Corporation, according to an announcement in Los Angeles yesterday by Harry Shuster, president and chief executive officer of the new enterprise.

Cocoa Futures Reach a New High on Reports of a Drop in African C...

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER
Cocoa futures prices on the New York Cocoa Exchange moved yesterday to a record high of $1.20 1/4 a pound in terms of the September delivery, a gain of about 2 cents over Friday's price.

The recent surge in cocoa prices has been based on the belief that the current African crop might be smaller than last year. There has been talk that the crop in Ghana, the world's largest cocoa producer, might total only 285,000 tons, down from 345,000 last year.

Some analysts suggest that such thinking is premature judgment that does not consider several factors, such as the possibility of a good Brazilian crop, which will be ready late in the fall. Furthermore they note the tendency of many African nations to underreport their crops to keep prices high.

In the case of Ghana a Government central marketing agency buys cocoa directly from its farmers and then reports weekly from fall until early spring what its purchases have been.

Last week the world's largest chocolate user, Hershey Foods, said it was considering cutting the size of its bars or raising prices. As Hershey goes, so go many other chocolate makers that buy cocoa to grind into chocolate.

Fortunately the other major ingredients of chocolate bars—sugar—has been relatively low in price this year. As one analyst commented yesterday, the market "continues in the doldrums" with a large amount of sugar overhanging it.

Soybean Futures Decline
CHICAGO, Sept. 13 (AP)—Soybeans, soybean meal and oil futures fell by the allowable daily limits, but meal and oil recovered a bit before the close.

The selloffs to an Agriculture Department estimate of the size of this year's crop that was higher than the trade had expected. Other bullish factors involved in trade brought down wheat futures 13 cents, oats 5 cents and corn 3 cents. Iceed brokers closed about steady to nearly 1/2 cent pound lower.

The Government Friday estimated the soybean crop of Sept. 1, at 1.27 billion bushels at 5.89 billion bushels and in record 2.14 billion bushels. Government had announced.

Sellers were very active on the soybean complex, but also some good support from interests. Within an hour the were down the limit, but all quickly thereafter. Soybeans fell from several times again and all for the close fell to the limit.

TV: 'An Old Sweet Song' on CBS

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

Last year an executive producer, Lionel Ephraim, and an agent, Tony Ford of William Morris, had an idea about doing a television drama on the subject of "reverse migration"...

Immediately following "Just an Old Sweet Song," and opposite the Bob Dylan special on NBC, CBS News has a "special report" on "Rescue at Entebbe" at 10 P.M. Using interviews with key Israeli leaders...

The old South, as the father observes, can be found these days in the Northern ghettos that are systematically ripping off blacks through drugs, prostitution and assorted indignities...

Dial-a-Phone Has Southern Roots

8:30-10:00 G.E. THEATER PRESENTS JUST AN OLD SWEET SONG

Cicely Tyson, Emmy Award winner for her performance in the now-classic "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," stars in an exciting and delightful dramatic special. She plays the mother of a black family from Detroit who visit the place of their family roots. They throw themselves—and their city ways—into life on a farm, and into the surprises of the new South. The force of their varied childhood memories drives parents and children in different directions, as they try to sort out the familiar and unexpected. A compelling event of the new season. Original story by Melvin Van Peebles.

THE DAZZLING ISRAELI RAID IN UGANDA, FROM THE SECRET PLANNING THROUGH THE JOYOUS CELEBRATION.

10:00-11:00 CBS NEWS PRESENTS RESCUE AT ENTEBBE

Brigadier General Dan Shomron, the Israeli mission commander, recalls the climax of a 2,500-mile raid to rescue over 100 hostages at Entebbe airfield in Uganda. His story is part of a CBS News Special Report that re-creates the entire operation, day by day. From vivid recollections of hostages, soldiers, and top figures in government, the narrative pieces together the strategy and execution of one of the most spectacular exploits in modern times. You share in each exciting stage of this latter-day deliverance that ends in an explosive welcome-home. Sponsored by Sears, Roebuck and Co.
